In Our HOUSE

By Arthur Mayse

For a difficult job well done, I commend to you Deputy Speaker William Speare, the quiet but durable government member for Cariboo who this session is chairing the House through its estimates of revenue and expenditure.

This phase of parliament's massive assignment is a rough one. The protocol of formal debate is behind us. Now, with the House in committee of supply, it is first come first served and devil take the hindmost, with members frequently contesting for the floor.

Sometimes as many as four members hop up in a dead heat.

"The chair recognizes the honorable member for Musk-rat Meadows," intones the referee from his post between our black-robed clerks at the bar, and that, without argument or right of appeal, is that.

Cut of Debate

When one of parliament's verbal roughhouses erupts, it is for chairman Speare to restore peace. This he does with terse vigor. "Order!" he barks, and down cracks the gavel to back his command.

Perhaps the best tribute to Mr. Speare is the complaint I have heard from champions of all three parties—that he really could sometimes let debate freewheel in this context (the slash at an opponent's jugular) continue a little longer.

Here's a sample of what Speare of Cariboo must contend with:

Chain of Yawns

William Hartley, Yale's contribution to the Legislative Assembly, beats NDP teammate Alex Macdonald to the jump as we pass from labor estimates to the health department votes.

He speaks earnestly of many things; while the clock hands creep from 9:38 to 10, and one yawn sets off another in a chain reaction.

Finally, 42 minutes after Mr. Hartley set out to assure us that health is joy, Sacred Dan Campbell ups with his blowgun and lets fly a dart. The bored back benchers squeak and titter. Mr. Hartley leans and glowers.

Bit of Shame

"If that is all the bit of some members have for the House," he bawls, "to sit and giggle and laugh... they don't belong here. They ought to go home. They ought to resign from this Legislature!"

Then, to Mr. Campbell, a dressing-down that reached a soaring peroration: "Shame! Shame on the member for Comox!"

Jolly fun, but time-wasting. Chairman Speare returns Mr. Hartley to his track, along which he chuffs for two mortal minutes more.

Nip of Vinegar

"My friend from Yale," said Mr. Turner, perhaps tempering party solidarity with the merest nip of vinegar, "has gone into the whole matter quite thoroughly, and I think has done quite a good job for a new member."

The Legislature's senior member then moved in like a skilled pro for a testing tap at Health Minister Martin's jaw. This with a reference to the Martin "body-guard" of civil servants crouched in echelon behind their chief.

HUNDREDS FLEE FLOOD

SHERBROOKE (CP)—The St. Francois River, fed by melting snow and driving rain and jammed with newly-broken ice, jumped its banks here early this morning, forcing hundreds of families to evacuate their homes.

TANKER BUNKER HILL which blew up and sank after explosion off Anacortes, Wash., today, is pictured as she looked in 1951. Fifteen of the crew of the 507-foot tanker are still to be accounted for.

NO EMOTION

Ruby Watches Act on Film

DALLAS (AP)—A Dallas police officer testified today that Jack Ruby told him he thought of killing Lee Harvey Oswald on Friday night, Nov. 22, when President Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas.

Local Mail Rate Ends In Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—Postmaster General Nicholson gave notice today of higher postal rates for first-class mail in local deliveries.

The present rate on letters of four cents for the first ounce and two cents for each additional ounce is to be abolished.

This will mean that first-class letters for local delivery will be charged at the standard inter-city rate of five cents for the first ounce and three cents for each additional ounce or fraction thereof, a post office spokesman said.

Mr. Nicholson's move was made in a resolution put on the Commons order paper preceding a bill to amend the Post Office Act.

Effective date of the change was not given. The resolution also forecast changes in the postal rates for newspapers and periodicals other than those published more frequently than weekly.

Details were not spelled out.

Guide Death Trial Set For Hunter

100-MILE HOUSE (CP)—A Washington State hunter will face trial on a charge of criminal negligence in the shooting death of a guide.

Grant Wyninger of Kent, Wash., was committed Thursday after a preliminary hearing in this central British Columbia community. He will appear at the Spring Assizes in Prince George.

Wyninger was charged after Guide Jack King was shot and killed Nov. 22, 1963, near the Bridge Lake guest ranch, 20 miles east of here.

Michael Graf, the ranch owner and King's partner for 17 years, told the hearing King had imperiled his own safety.

The officer is Sgt. P. T. Dean. He quoted Ruby as saying that Friday night was "the first time he thought of killing him and he wanted the world to know that Jews have guts."

Ruby, sitting in court today, saw a motion picture of the scene in which he shot Lee Harvey Oswald last Nov. 24.

He was within a few feet of a portable screen on which the picture was projected.

Ruby leaned forward, cupping his chin in his hands. He stared intently during the short film. He showed no signs of emotion.

Ruby, 52, operator of a girls-show nightclub in Dallas, is charged with murder with malice. District Attorney Henry M. Wade says he will demand a verdict of death in the electric chair. The defence says Ruby was temporarily insane when he shot Oswald, the accused assassin of President Kennedy.

T. D. McMillon, a young, sandy-haired officer, said Thursday Ruby talked about his motive in shooting Oswald.

HEARS CONVERSATION

"Do you remember anything else in that conversation with Ruby dealing with why he killed Lee Harvey Oswald?" Wade asked.

"Yes, sir. There was quite a bit of conversation as to why he killed him later on in the day," McMillon replied. Wade did not pursue the point.

Earlier, McMillon testified an officer asked Ruby, "why did you do it?" He said Ruby answered:

"Somebody had to do it. Somebody had to take care of it. You guys couldn't do it."

As to how Ruby got to the jail door when Oswald was being transferred to another jail, McMillon said Ruby told him he simply walked there.

"He stated a lieutenant was pulling out of the basement in a squad car and he just walked by an officer there between the wall and the car. He said someone called to him but he just ducked his head and kept going."

Chief defence counsel Melvin Bell asked if Ruby hadn't told McMillon he "did not premeditate shooting Oswald. The officer said, 'he didn't tell me that.'"

REMAINS of tanker Bunker Hill—a life buoy and oil life-jackets—are displayed by seamen at Whidbey Island naval air station after being left by some of the 22 crewmen rescued. (AP Wirephoto.)

SEAMAN'S STORY:

'It Was Like A Bomb Hit Us'

Sheldon Phillips of Seattle, chief pumpman, was one of the first crewmen rescued after the tanker Bunker Hill exploded and sank in Puget Sound before dawn Friday. Here is his account of what happened, as told to Associated Press.

By SHELDON PHILLIPS
It was like a bomb hit us. And it still seems like a nightmare. I don't know how it could have happened. This was a good crew and we've always been very, very safety conscious.

We'd just finished washing the empty tanks with salt water before pulling into Anacortes to take on a load of gasoline at the Shell refinery for Portland.

It was still dark, about two hours before dawn. I was sitting in the mess with three others having a cup of coffee when there was an enormous explosion. It threw me against the bulkhead in the mess and I had to knock down a door to get out.

All hell had broken loose. I ran to the aft end of the ship and tried to look toward the bow. All we saw was a sheet of flames. The blast had blown the tanker right in half. I'll never forget seeing the bow section floating by, pointed up like a missile, with Harold Baker of Los Angeles, the lookout, hanging on to a handrail.

ANOTHER BLAST

Then there was another explosion on the bow section and another big sheet of flame. Later, I saw Harold in the water. He was badly burned. Those of us who made it

Blasts Split Ship in Half

ANACORTES (AP)—The 504-foot tanker Bunker Hill, sailing empty up Puget Sound, blew apart in three fiery explosions before dawn today and sank in 300 feet of water off Whidbey Island.

Twenty-five of the crew were rescued by a navy crash boat and coast guard helicopter. All but two were unhurt.

The others aboard estimated at about 15, were unaccounted for and feared dead. They included most of the officers, whose quarters were amidship where the blasts occurred.

The tanker normally carried a crew of 44, but several were ashore.

Planes, helicopters and crash boats searched through out the day in a wind and rain storm for other possible survivors, but there was little hope. Hours went by with no trace, and survival time in the icy water was estimated at little more than an hour.

None of the survivors could explain what happened when the ship, owned by the Keystone Tankship Corporation, Wilmington, Del., was ripped in two in Rosario Strait 19 miles southeast of here.

The Bunker Hill which operated most of the time in Pacific Northwest waters, was bound from Tacoma, Wash., for the Shell Oil Co. refinery at Anacortes to take on a load of gasoline for Portland, Ore.

Safety Precautions Taken

The crew said the tanks had been washed with sea water and all usual safety precautions had been taken.

Horace Bailey of Belfast, Maine, said the blast "blew me out of the sack." He said the door to his room was stuck but he forced it open and fled, wearing only the bottom part of his long underwear and a life jacket. He left $100 in cash behind, and said some of the other survivors lost as much as $600.

The first explosion was seen at 4:02 a.m., PST, from the Whidbey Island naval station control tower. Petty Officer G. four,

B. McBridge, the air controller, said it looked "like a small atom bomb."

McBridge said there was a flash in the sky, then two more explosions. He could see the superstructure of the tanker etched against the horizon about five miles off shore.

A navy P2V warming up for anti-submarine patrol was diverted to the scene and reported minutes later seeing survivors in the water and on the fantail. A navy crash boat, quickly on the scene, picked up 21 men and a coast guard helicopter rescued control tower. Petty Officer G. four,

Lookout Blown Off Section

Harold Baker, Pasadena, Calif., the lookout who was blown off the bow section before it sank, was severely burned, and Victor Chavez, Lomita, Calif., the cook, was treated for exposure and shock.

The two other survivors treated at a hospital here and 21 at the Whidbey Naval Hospital were reported in good condition and released.

Among the missing were the skipper, Capt. Michael J. Abraham, Garder, Groe, Calif., and chief mate, R. H. Blake, Long Beach, Calif. Both were on the bridge when the explosion struck. Ronald Lockwood, Mountlake Terrace, Wash., the junior third mate, is also unaccounted for.

The National Maritime Union listed an additional five men in the crew not among the known survivors. They were Jim Johnson, radio operator, address unknown; Harold Schmidt, steward, Spokane, Wash.; Steve Harris, messman, Seattle; William Still, messman, whose home is in California, and William Bishop, Seattle.

The second mate, Burtrum L. Vulliet, was not aboard. Vulliet had taken off for this trip.

SEATTLE (AP)—Ira O. Philpott Jr. of Seattle, third mate on the tanker Bunker Hill, missed Friday's explosion and blast which sank the ship because the tanker left Tacoma ahead of time Thursday night.

"The ship was to have left at midnight," he said. "Then the time was changed, and I wasn't notified. I got there at 11:25 and it was just pulling away from the dock."

Final Arguments In Banks' Trial

MONTREAL (CP)—Final arguments were heard today at the preliminary hearing of Hal C. Banks on a charge of conspiracy to commit assault.

Sessions Judge Emile Trovati set March 12 as date for judgment on whether to send the president of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind.) to trial.

CRUCIAL WIN in Canadian curling championships was recorded this morning by B.C. rink skipped by Lyall Dagg (above). Dagg's 8-3 victory over Saskatchewan's Ernie Richardson brought B.C. to within one game of national title. (See story, Page 12.)

Dagg Rink Wins Brier BULLETIN

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I. (UPI)—British Columbia, who downed the mighty Richardsons of Saskatchewan in the morning, 8-3, won the 35th Dominion curling championships today by defeating Prince Edward Island's host rink, 9-7, in an extra-end victory.

Painters Awarded $1 VANCOUVER (CP)—A new contract giving wage increases totalling $1 an hour over five years has been won by 1,100 painters in Greater Vancouver, the Lower Mainland and Fraser Valley.

Alaska Peak Erupts KODIAK (AP)—Mt. Alagashak, 2,824-foot peak in the valley of ten thousand smokes, erupted Thursday evening. The motor vessel Jaguar radioed today. The blast was like an "atomic explosion," Antrim Svedin, master of the Jaguar, and his crew members reported.

'Don't Inflamm Passions'—LBJ

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson, in a personal message made public today, Las told Soviet Premier Khrushchev that outsiders "should all strive not to inflame passions" in the eastern Mediterranean.

Johnson's 200-word letter, dated Wednesday, said it was the firm intention of the U.S. government to avoid heightening passions raised by the Cyprus dispute. He added:

"I sincerely hope, Mr. Chairman, that it is also that of your government."

Johnson at the same time took Khrushchev to task for some of the statements made by the Soviet leader in a Feb. 7 letter to the president. It was the Khrushchev letter that prompted the response from Johnson.

The president said he had carefully studied Khrushchev's message and had concluded that it "was based upon a seriously mistaken appreciation both of the situation in Cyprus, and of the aims of the United States in agreeing to lend its assistance in improving that situation."

The president said U.S. actions have been "for one purpose alone, that of assisting the Cypriots to restore a peaceful situation in Cyprus."

Johnson told Khrushchev that the Soviet premier's February letter was based on faulty premises, "whatever may have been the motivations of the Soviet government."

However, Johnson said he would "agree fully... with one thought that you expressed in your letter," adding: "It is certainly true that avoiding aggravation of the situation in the eastern Mediterranean is in the general interests of all of us."

PAUL

EVEN HONEST CUSTOMERS DON'T MIND

Bank Bandits, Forgers Fear New Cameras

MONTREAL (UPI)—Bandits are staying away in droves from city houses of commerce, thanks in a large part, say the banks and the police, to two anti-crook camera innovations.

The devices have been placed in selected banks on an experimental basis. The most spectacular is a hidden movie camera that records holdup attempts at the flick of a switch, but the one that is producing the most spectacular results is "regiscope," a camera that looks like a gum machine.

Regiscope photographs unknown or questionable check cashers, and prints on the same picture a photo of the check. At least two banks say they have not had a single loss through forgery or rubber checks since they installed the machines months ago.

"And equally important to us," said an official of the Royal Bank of Canada, "our honest customers don't seem to mind when we ask them to be 'regiscope'."

LONDON—A slim, black-haired young mother today became Britain's new "Queen of the Witches."

With the title went nearly $70,000, an eerie 450-year-old "witches' cottage" on the Isle of Man—and a broomstick.

Mrs. Monique Marie Wilson, whose witchcraft name is "Lady Olwen," learned Friday night she was the main beneficiary of the will of Dr. Gerald Brousseau Gardner, the 80-year-old leader of Britain's witches who died last month.

Gardner, a former colonial official, became the nation's leading expert of witchcraft. He called himself a "white witch"—one who does only good—and built his "witches' cottage" into a museum that became one of the Isle of Man's main tourist sights.

MOSCOW—Moscow's television-viewers got their first look at Britain's famed "Beatles" Friday night but it was accompanied by a commentator's caustic remarks.

Showing pictures of the Beatles' triumphant, squealing reception in the United States and upon their return to Britain recently, the commentator said: "What can you expect of a group which doesn't even know who Beethoven is?"

The Soviet press has criticized the Beatles' reception in the U.S. as proof of the decay of American morals and also accused the British of using them as a "secret weapon to get the minds of youth off shattered ideals."

HAMILTON—Jim Scott and Terry Dickie, both of Hamilton, got themselves pickled Thursday, all because of a sudden wind storm.

The storm lifted a two-car garage from its foundation at a Hamilton plant and dumped it in pieces on a cluster of pickle vats in an adjacent food plant lot.

Scott and Dickie were sent to clean up the mess. As they hugged a sheet of plywood between them another gust roared in and the board became a sail.

The two men were floated about 100 feet and then, splash, into a vat filled with three feet of vinegar and dill pickles.

NEW WESTMINSTER—A 22-year-old girl, awarded $136,256 by a court in Honolulu for burns she suffered when a hula skirt caught fire at a party in 1957, will use the money to further her education.

Carol Lee Chapman said she is going back to school with the money awarded her by a U.S. federal court in 1961 after she sued the owners of the gift shop where the skirt was purchased.

A U.S. circuit court of appeals turned down an appeal by an insurance company who had refused to pay the money to Miss Chapman on the grounds there was no coverage at the time of the fire.

LONDON—Hospital chaplain Tudens Murzewski was fined $26 and prohibited from driving for a year after pleading guilty to drunken driving.

He left the court, got into his car and drove it away. Minutes later he was back in the same court on charges of driving while disqualified.

"I didn't know what to do with the car," said the chaplain. He was fined another $28 and banned from driving for another year.

TORONTO—A Toronto meat market operator Thursday was jailed for one year and fined $3,000 for selling adulterated meat and meat exceeding fat content regulations.

John van Hoorn was convicted on 13 counts under the food and drug act. Food and drug officials said it was the first imprisonment in the Metropolitan Toronto area for the offense. Magistrate Robert Dineper also ruled that if Van Hoorn does not pay the fine he will spend another year in jail.

VANCOUVER—Olive the octopus has laid thousands of eggs on the glass tank walls at the aquarium in Stanley Park. "We are hoping to have several hundred baby octopuses," said Dr. Murray Newman, curator. First eggs were noticed Feb. 19, 10 days after Olive was caught at the north end of Vancouver Island.

New Deal Made With E. Germany

WINNIPEG (CP)—Communist East Germany has re-entered the Canadian wheat market with a three-year agreement to purchase 27,600,000 bushels.

The agreement was announced today by the Canadian wheat board.

East Germany last bought Canadian wheat directly in the 1955-56 crop year when the European country took 2,000,000 bushels.

Later, in the 1960-62 period, East Germany received another 10,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat via Communist China.

China diverted substantial quantities of wheat purchased from Canada to East Germany and also to Albania, China's ally in her ideological dispute with the Soviet Union.

Prayers Set Sunday For Msgr. McLellan

Prayers will be said at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in St. Andrew's Cathedral for Msgr. Alexander J. McLellan, who died Thursday evening. He was 76.

Msgr. McLellan was resident chaplain at St. Joseph's Hospital for the past 25 years.

He was born in Inverness, N.S., an educated at St. Francis Xavier University and St. Augustine Seminary in Toronto.

After being ordained as a priest in Victoria in 1919, he served at St. Andrew's Cathedral and as a parish priest in Ladysmith before becoming chaplain at St. Joseph's.

He is survived by his brother, Donald, in Glenville, N.S.; two sisters, Mrs. Margaret Seully in Esquimalt and another in Edmonton, and his cousin, Rev. Louis MacLellan, pastor of Queen of Peace Church, Esquimalt.

A pontifical requiem mass will be sung at 11 a.m. Monday. Celebrant will be Bishop Remi de Roo, assisted by Father MacLellan and Rev. Daniel Johnston.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later by Hayward's.

CAR PLUNGE TAKES LIFE

VANCOUVER (CP)—Alexander Dobson Lamb, 40, died Thursday when his car plunged off the B.C. government ferry dock at Horseshoe Bay. Lamb had just driven the car off the ferry Langdale Queen when the mishap occurred. Police are investigating.

FIGHTING ERUPTS

Makarios Turns Over Hostages

President Makarios of Cyprus today ordered that all Turkish-Cypriot hostages held by Greek-Cypriots be handed over to the Red Cross here by midday Saturday.

At the United Nations in New York, secretary-general U Thant today confirmed his appointment of Lt. Gen. P. S. Gyan of India as commander of a UN peace force for Cyprus.

And in Stockholm, the Swedish government was expected to agree to contribute Swedish troops to a Cyprus peace force, a foreign ministry spokesman said.

In Ottawa however, External Affairs Minister Martin says Canada still has reached no decision on sending Canadian troops to Cyprus.

Martin said he personally had been in touch with Secretary-General Thant concerning possible Canadian participation. He reported that a three-man UN team was flying to Cyprus today for talks with the Cypriot government.

The Irish cabinet also has deferred its decision on the UN request for one Irish battalion. A government statement said it would ask Thant to clarify several aspects of the proposed force.

Meanwhile, in Cyprus itself, fighting between Greek and Turkish Cypriots broke out for the third straight day in villages near the north coast harbor of Kyrenia.

A cease-fire agreement reached late Thursday appeared to have collapsed.

After a lull of several hours, shooting started up again, and increased in intensity with daylight.

A truce patrol composed of a British, a Greek and a Turkish officer were making strenuous efforts to get the two sides to observe the cease-fire.

Clubwoman Succumbs

DUNCAN—Mrs. Ivy Elizabeth White, an active clubwoman, died in hospital Wednesday in her 52nd year.

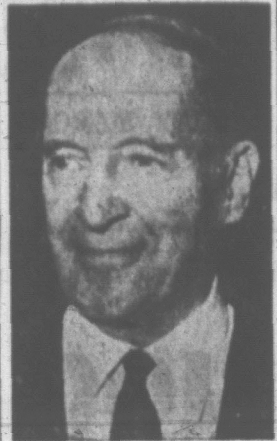

Born in Southgate, England, she came to Canada 51 years ago and for 24 years lived at Whitehorse, Yukon. She had been in Duncan five years.

Mrs. White was a member of the Eastern Star in Whitehorse, the IOOE Dogwood chapter in Duncan, the Ladies Golf and Country Club, Cowichan and the Maple Bay Yacht Club.

She is survived by the husband, Richard; a sister, Mrs. R. Chadsey, Vancouver, and stepson, Robert White, of Duncan.

Funeral service was held today at St. John's Anglican Church, with Rev. W. E. Greenhalgh officiating. Interment was at Mt. View Cemetery.

MAJOR SURGERY was performed on Gen. Douglas MacArthur at Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington today and surgeons announced they had found no evidence of cancer. MacArthur's gall-bladder was removed. A bulletin issued four hours after the operation said the general's condition was satisfactory.

Ask The Teacher

Q. Who would a parent contact in a senior secondary school to discuss a child's progress, since the pupil has a different teacher for each subject and his home room teacher merely checks attendance?

A. This is a problem. The parent is advised to consider two approaches: assess weaknesses from the report card and arrange interviews with specific teachers. These may be arranged simply by contacting the school office by telephone.

Secondly, the parent may contact the pupil's counsellor, arranging for an interview, and the counsellor may at his discretion bring in specific teachers or arrange other interviews.

Q. When a principal is appointed to a school, does he always remain at that school until retirement?

A. Records show that in Greater Victoria principals move from school to school within the district. Some have become principals of the largest schools; where usually they remain to retirement. This has been satisfactory to all concerned.

to the stern tried to launch the two lifeboats, but one was jammed. We got the other one in the water and some of the fellows climbed in. There wasn't room for everyone, though.

I grabbed a life ring and so did the cook, Chevez, and we jumped. Then we found an oar in the water to hang onto and keep together. I wasn't hurt but Chevez looked like he was in shock.

Our big worry was the temperature of the water, and how long we could last. It was bitter cold. We knew we'd be rescued but wondered if we could hold on.

The Coast Guard helicopter pulled us out in about half an hour, but by that time my legs were so numb from the cold I couldn't climb aboard. One of the Coast Guard men had to help us.

That's about all I can remember, except to say the crew was very brave. That leaves 19 missing. It doesn't look good for them, and you don't know how terrible that makes us feel when we think of them.

None of the missing are from the officers' quarters amidships. This was in the bow half that went down first.

We operated mostly in Pacific Northwest waters and most of the crew was from Seattle, Anacortes and Portland. This was a good crew, and always very safety conscious. We knew we carried dangerous high explosive material. We'd never had an accident before.

It doesn't seem possible this could have happened.

GORDON EXPLAINS POLICY

Bank Bids Treated Alike

By ALEX YOUNG
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—The federal government won't show any preferences in dealing with applications for establishment of new chartered banks in Western Canada, Finance Minister Gordon said today.

"We believe there is still room in Canada for new banks," Mr. Gordon said in an interview. Applications for new bank charters would be treated alike, he said, provided they met requirements of the bank act.

Mr. Gordon was commenting on reports circulating in Eastern Canada that the proposed Bank of Western Canada, headed by James Coyne, former governor of the Bank of Canada, would get preference over two other bank promotions—those of the Bank of British Columbia and Laurentide Bank of Canada.

DISCOUNTS REPORTS

Mr. Gordon discounted reports that Ottawa would approve the Coyne application but place a temporary "freeze" on the other two bank applications.

He added, however, that the Coyne application might go through first, but this was only because it was first in line.

To bring health and medical services to Canadians in remote parts of Canada, the Canadian Red Cross operates 38 outpost hospitals and nursing stations.

The finance minister said the report of the Porter royal commission on banking and finance would have some bearing on bids for the new charters. It would be released some time in April.

When asked in the House today about reports of the "freeze" on the B.C. and Laurentide banks, Mr. Gordon said he had "absolutely nothing to say about such speculative reports."

Conflicting Views Bring Sharp Debate

OTTAWA (CP)—Sharply opposed views on the Columbia River treaty were expressed in the Commons Thursday.

H. W. Herridge, veteran New Democratic Party member from Kootenay West, saw it "as a political blasphemy against the works of creation."

James Byrne, Liberal MP for Kootenay East, saw the treaty as a good document that "is going to rebound to the prosperity of every living soul in Canada."

Mr. Herridge, who has lived beside the river for 58 years and who has been one of the most persistent opponents of the treaty, made a stirring 30-minute speech in which he charged that the Canadian negotiators were taken in by the Americans. The whole project is a sell-out, he said.

The only difference between the present treaty and the one originally negotiated by the previous Conservative government "is that we get a bit more money for selling Canada out."

'Wallowing In Ignorance'

But he said there was a time when "like my honorable friend from West Kootenay, I was wallowing in ignorance."

Anyway, he said, a statesman can always change his mind. It's only a politician who can't.

He predicted that the development would result in great industrial expansion in the Kootenays and "the people are very happy now that a decision has been made."

While spokesmen for the NDP party have made it clear that the 17-member group will fight the treaty, all other parties continue to give it general approval, thus assuring its eventual passage.

Jack Davis (L—Coast-Cap-Biano), an earlier opponent of the joint treaty, said enough changes had been made in the new treaty to make it worth supporting for the benefits it bestows on Canada.

The parliamentary secretary to the prime minister said the changes ensured, among other things, that Canada would be able to control the use of the Columbia River water in Canada for irrigation, power development, and consumption. The entire project now was being handled in a "business-like way."

Mr. Byrne said Mr. Herridge apparently "would be quite happy to flood vast areas of the East Kootenays as long as we leave his cabbage patch alone in the West Kootenays."

Walter Dinsdale, former Conservative resources minister, said it was a good treaty, and it was time to get on with the approval. C. J. M. Willoughby (PC—Kamloops) said the new treaty is an "essential vindication" of the original one negotiated under the previous Conservative government, and it shouldn't be held up.

Donald S. Macdonald (L—Toronto Rosedale) said the arguments by NDP members were based on "unfacts" and "misconceptions."

Mr. Davis predicted that implementation of the treaty would bring B.C. lower electricity rates by the mid-1970s. Mr. Davis countered Mr. Douglas's opposition to power "exports" to the U.S.—sale in

700 UNDER SIEGE

POLIS (AP)—The siege continues for 700 Turkish Cypriots in the town of Polis.

More than a month ago, outnumbered Turkish families from Polis and nearby villages gathered in a Turkish school, seeking safety from the undeclared civil war between the Greek and Turkish communities on Cyprus.

They still are there. Village elders, mothers, fathers, youths and babies are huddled in the two-storey building with little apparent hope of returning to their homes.

"Without escorts by British troops we cannot move anywhere," said Principal Cahit Cavusoglu. "We are surrounded."

"The trouble with Polis is the trouble with this bloody island," said a British officer.

"Both sides say they will not harm each other and neither believes a bloody word of it."

Through the Home Maker Services of the Canadian Red Cross, trained workers in 34 communities visit homes where the mother is ill and feed and care for the children and perform the household tasks.

Wiser's whiskies are older in virtually all cases!

Older to Wiser's means aged in wood, not merely the date stamp on the bottle. It means "married in wood" which is a process of returning the spirits to wood after final blending—for a further period of quiet aging. It means "lighter", smoother flavour acquired naturally—through patient aging. For the best whiskies, drink one that's older and Wiser's

The Modern Approach

THE PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT's new legislation on mental health care is designed to put mental hospitals on much the same basis as existing medical hospitals and appears to be fully in accord with the latest thinking of experts in mental health. Health Minister Martin describes the measure as the most modern in the world at any rate it is solidly based on modern theories in this field.

A major item in the authoritative Ross report of 1962 was that mental institutions should not be too large, and that they should not be located so far from communities that the patients become cut off from contact with their families and the world of reality.

The new legislation will encourage establishment of mental hospitals in close association with the communities they serve, in the same way as medical hospitals today. Visits of families and friends will be facilitated — an important element of treatment, and the restricted size of the hospitals will help to avoid the disadvantages of "institutionalism."

Mental illness has ceased to be the whispered-about malady it was in earlier days. It is recognized as a common ailment of our twentieth century existence — one person in ten is said to be in need of help of some kind during his lifetime — and is now being approached on a commonsense basis.

The concern of the new type of hospitals will be to cure the patient as soon as this can be done, or at least make it possible for him to return to home life. The outmoded idea of stowing patients away out of sight is as discredited as the eighteenth century goal. The improvement of out-patient treatment, provided for in the act, will also be a promising feature. Both the speedup in discharge, and the treatment of patients who continue to live at home, will result in considerable savings to the public purse.

There will be adjustments to make in mental hospital financing and municipalities are already concerned as to the burden of cost which may have to be shared. Mr. Martin speaks of federal assistance, but it is obvious that if the municipalities are to carry any of the expense of the new treatment centres there will have to be a radical readjustment of provincial grants. The municipalities cannot stand any further tax burdens on property; even under present circumstances they are struggling to provide essential services.

Implementation of the new legislation must await federal action to give aid. There is thus a large "if" in the province's program. But reasonable delay should give everyone interested an opportunity to study the effects of financing the scheme; on professional aspects there appears to be wide agreement.

A U.S. Gate In Our Fishing Fence

MR. BARRY MATHER, THE popular and highly competent Vancouver columnist who now carries the responsibilities of giving New Westminster N.D.P. representation in the Commons, has doubts about the benefits which a 12-mile limit would confer on Canadian fishermen.

He has quoted some Washington news reports to the effect that Canada would extend to American fishermen "historic rights" to fish in waters which would fall within the Canadian 12-mile limit and that those rights would probably be perpetual. This contradicts previous inferences that Canada hoped to fade out such rights after a period of years, eventually reserving the waters within a 12-mile limit for Canadian fishermen only.

Historic rights would accord to nationals who traditionally have fished the waters off Canada's coast the privilege of continuing to fish there even when the jurisdiction of Canada, now extending only three miles to sea, was pushed out four times as far.

Mr. Mather's belief that such rights would continue indefinitely may be justified. Among other reasons for extension of privileges to Americans is the fact that a lot of United States money has gone into fisheries conservation in Canadian rivers, notably the Fraser. This has been an investment by the United States for the preservation of stocks which are jointly caught as they swim either on the high seas or through Canadian and American waters on their way back to spawning beds.

Whether or not investments of this nature could be considered fully paid off by catches made over a period of years by American fishermen is a question not yet answered by negotiations between the United States and Canada over Canada's proposed 12-mile limit.

But even if Americans continued to enjoy access to waters which would fall within the expanded Canadian jurisdiction, surely the 12-mile limit offers some protection against future difficulties for Canadian fishermen.

Last year alarmed notice was taken of Japanese and Russian fishing vessels harvesting fish relatively close to British Columbia's coast.

Extension of Canadian off-shore jurisdiction to 12 miles from land would not, of course, persuade the migrating sockeye and some other species to spurn the lures or the nets of fishermen from nations other than Canada while such fish were on the high seas. But it would help to establish control over those species which do not venture far to sea, the coast-hugging salmon that make up an important, though not the predominant, element of the annual haul.

If American fishermen's historic rights permitted them within the 12-mile fence, they naturally would share in the catch of such fish, to the detriment of Canadians. But there would be more fish left for Canadians than if all nations, Japan and Russia included, were also admitted into these particular fisheries.

On this basis, it is difficult to follow Mr. Mather's argument that the 12-mile limit "may do more harm than good to the industry and fishermen" of British Columbia.

Bright Prospects

AT ONE POINT IN THE TOURIST season last year, visitors coming in to Victoria on Douglas Street were barely able to find their way due to the heavy pall of smoke which hung low over the road. And if they chose to stay at any of the motels along the Gorge they were likely to find everything they touched, including the water in swimming pools, covered with a coating of soot.

But not this year, according to city manager Dennis Young. By June 1 all the major smoke problems in the area will be eliminated and Victoria visitors and citizens alike will be breathing pure air.

We have waited a long time and heard many promises, but if this is "it," Victorians will be grateful to the council's smoke abatement committee headed by Ald. Geoff Edgewood and to the industries and businesses that have co-operated, some at considerable cost, in solving the problem.

It is worth remembering that when serious efforts to solve the air pollution problem were started several years ago there were many people who declared nothing could be done, that the choice would have to be between industrial activity or unpolluted air. However, the council committee, spurred on by those who were most seriously affected by the smoke and who refused to stop complaining, has been able by patient work to obtain the co-operation of offending firms. And so far as we are aware the enforcement of the anti-smoke bylaw has not put anyone out of business.

Too Many Curtain Calls

OTTAWA MAYOR CHARLOTTE Whitton's public displays of temper have long been grist for the newspaper copy desks and targets for press photographers. However, her latest outburst, in which she angrily demanded — unsuccessfully — the arrest of a news photographer because he sought to take her picture as she arrived at Ottawa's Uplands Airport, seems to demote her from the role of public exhibitionist to that of public bore. Miss Whitton, to speak bluntly, is becoming a bit of an embarrassment — to women, who used to look hopefully to her as an example of their sex in public office; to Ottawa; whose citizens have had a fairly long exposure to these public exhibitions of feminine irascibility; to her long-suffering council; and in fact to just about everybody, including, we suspect, Mayor Whitton.

FROM OTTAWA

A 'Spectacular Increase' for Mr. Wilson

THE address of Mr. Harold Wilson, the British Labor party leader, to the Canadian Exporters Association in Montreal, has received a good deal of critical attention in political and official circles here. This is not surprising because the Labor party, on its recent form, would appear to have an excellent chance of assuming power in Britain some time this year. One of Mr. Wilson's concerns, it is assumed, was to convince his business audience that Canadian traders have nothing to fear from the policies of a Labor administration.

Western

He is a very lucid and highly intelligent man. A study of his text suggests, however, that he is inclined to think of the Canadian economy in rather old terms and, accordingly, to hark back to solutions which seem irrelevant, or dangerous, in present conditions.

Like Mr. Diefenbaker, Mr. Wilson is keen for a Commonwealth conference aimed at a spectacular increase in Commonwealth trade. Unlike Mr. Diefenbaker, he offers a specific proposal for achieving this objective. He suggests that Canada should accord Britain a specific preference in awarding contracts; this to be patterned after the U.S. "Buy American" provisions. In return the British would undertake to provide "guaranteed markets for Commonwealth primary produce" thus providing "assurance and economic stability in the Commonwealth."

Blames Tories

Mr. Wilson feels that the British Conservative government is largely to blame for the decline in the relative importance of Commonwealth trade and he cites, particularly, the abandonment of long-term bulk purchase contracts for Commonwealth food and other materials. This measure may not be altogether just; after its experience with the Anglo-Canadian wheat agreement, it is doubtful if the Canadian government would have been willing to enter another deal on comparable terms.

The fact is, in any case, that new times bring new worries. Our primary industries have retained very great importance as foreign exchange earners and economic stimulation. Unfortunately, they no longer provide direct employment on the scale of earlier days.

In consequence, successive governments at Ottawa have become more and more absorbed with the development of secondary industries able to stand up against competition at home and to invade foreign markets. Mr. Wilson's plan would guarantee markets, probably at fixed prices, for products like wheat which in recent years have been finding their own markets at the best prices obtainable without expanding opportunities for goods typical of our maturing industrial economy.

But what of the other side of the bargain? It is true, as Mr. Wilson says, that the Saskatchewan government and some utilities do now provide a British preference on contracts. Apparently, however, he would have the Canadian government sponsor such a preference generally. This would certainly involve us in a new quarrel with the Americans who are in a position to retaliate against the very Canadian industries which make the largest claims as direct exporters.

It seems to have escaped Mr. Wilson's attention that Canadian firms are exempt from "Buy American" provisions in the defence production sharing program. Moreover, this program is becoming steadily more important. In the four and one-half years to the end of June, 1963, the value of such business placed with Canadian firms amounted to about $657 millions.

Major Gain

For the year 1962 alone, the value was $254 millions, up 75 per cent from 1961. Figures for the full year 1963 are not yet available.

Mr. Wilson, in other words, is asking us to surrender a large substance for the shadow of problematic gains allegedly accruing from long-term bulk purchase contracts.

It might be more realistic, and more to the advantage of British bidders, to attack the existing and expanding system of provincial preferences in Canada. For the British almost certainly have more to lose from the preferential treatment now being increasingly extended to provincial firms (at the expense of any outsiders) than they have to gain by the retention of the scattered but British programs mentioned by Mr. Wilson.

The British Labor leader appears to be two-minded about the Kennedy round of trade and tariff negotiations. While favoring it in principle, he foresees dire consequences if the venture succeeds. The depths of his pessimism will be evident from these two paragraphs.

"In all our countries, there is widespread acceptance of the need, on both national and international grounds, for steady and sustained but much more rapid economic expansion. The experience of Britain, where every production spurt in the past few years has been followed by an immediate and crippling balance of payments crisis, shows how tightly this ceiling presses down on our efforts to expand. It is a problem we are facing again today.

"This problem will be aggravated, not eased, by our plans and hopes for freeing the mechanism of international trade in the Western world. The more successful we are through the Kennedy round in removing impediments to trade, the more quickly we shall run into the danger that the whole of our Western trading system will seize up through a shortage of liquidity, with the same sudden shock that an automobile suffers when it runs out of lubricating oil."

Ottawa Differs

Mr. Wilson's pessimism is not shared in Ottawa. His view is obviously a generalization based upon a succession of frustrating British experiences. While it is true that Mr. Maudling has advanced rather vague proposals looking to an increase in international liquidity, he has at no time accepted the dismal inevitability of crises spawned by international economic well-being.

Canadian officials with direct experience of such monetary problems are by no means convinced that British difficulties are attributable to a shortage of liquidity or that the situation would be cured by greater liquidity.

In their view Britain has repeatedly encountered balance of payments difficulties because her industry has not been sufficiently competitive to match the offerings of her great industrial rivals. They are not persuaded by this experience that there exists, as Mr. Wilson claims, "a defect in the international system for replenishing... reserves."

The present Canadian government would very much like to see an increase in Anglo-Canadian trade and Mr. Sharp has promised a careful examination of regulations regarded by British exporters as impediments to sales over here. But ministers are not attracted by schemes for the creation of artificial trade patterns and they are well aware that even the residual preferential system has many critics in the United States.

In the circumstances Mr. Wilson cannot have made many converts on the ministerial side in Ottawa and he may not even have won the wholehearted approval of Mr. Diefenbaker, who will scarcely relish the verdict that "the last few years of Anglo-Canadian trade present a pathetic record."

Quebec and the Queen

Montreal Le Devoir

Editorial excerpts from two leading Montreal newspapers.

MR. MARCEL Chaput's speech in Toronto is getting a lot of publicity and arousing sharp reactions, particularly in the Commons. The importance given to his words and the penalties demanded can only be explained by the political malaise dividing the country. In giving them too much importance, there is a risk of playing into the hands of the separatists and of deepening further the moat between the two Canadian collectivities.

English-Canadians and French-Canadians haven't got the same attitude toward the monarchical principle of our system of government, any more than toward the sovereign and the royal family.

This does not prevent a feeling of esteem for a sovereign who is personally most worthy and who fills a difficult and burdensome role in an exemplary manner. But the fact remains that the crown has become simply a symbol.

If the next visit of the Queen to Quebec is becoming a source of uneasiness, protest or even anxiety about the possibility of disagreeable incidents, it is not because the event is important in itself. At the opening of the St. Lawrence Seaway the Queen's coming aroused neither discontent nor excitement in Quebec. The difference, this year, is that the event may have a political bearing.

The coming visit already appears to have been given a predictable significance. A warm welcome in Quebec would prove that our province remains loyal to the Crown and to Confederation. Whether or not this was the original intention, the inference now exists, the authorities are aware of it and in this sense one can speak of provocation, since it is a superfluous and useless celebration. The best thing would be to cancel an event that threatens to do more harm than good.

Montreal La Presse

IN normal times we easily overlook symbolism of royalty. We have practically no fault to find with the Queen coming to open the St. Lawrence Seaway or simply coming to visit us without any specific objective. But this time the situation is anything but normal. And the theme of the visit is likewise most extraordinary.

The whole question of the constitutional system under which we live has been opened to discussion. And this discussion is not always calm either on our side or the English-Canadian.

Mr. Pearson ought to have taken into account the fact that the climate is fairly tense, especially in Quebec, where the separatists, without being numerous, are extremely vigorous. Also the fact, unfortunately, that a little group of terrorists remains at large. For them, this royal visit constitutes an affront, a sort of solemn approval of the position of their "adversaries."

Perhaps Mr. Chaput exaggerated in saying that the Queen's life could be endangered. With adequate protection, such a catastrophe can surely be averted. But no police cordon can stop invective and insults. Besides, why persist in any sort of provocation of certain elements of our population at a time when Quebec is asked to remain calm and temperate? If a royal visit to Quebec were essential, one would understand, but the necessity of precisely this visit is far from obvious. No indeed, the invitation sent to the Queen is not an act of perfect wisdom. And Her Majesty's Canadian advisers ought to be the first to admit it.

DENNIS THE MENACE

BOY WAS I WORRIED! THIS GUY SAID YOU'D NEVER TRY AND FIND ME!

WASHINGTON:

Goldwater The Juvenile

By WALTER LIPPMANN

AFTER some 10 days in Southern California where I did little except sniff the air, I have come back feeling that since last year there has been a change of mood. It is a change for the better. A year ago in the aftermath of the Cuban missile crisis there was an alarming amount of floating anxiety, of irrational fear and groundless anger, expressing itself in war-whooping at our adversaries abroad and in extremism at home. The anxiety which was threatening to unnerve the country is subsiding. I did not, of course, take a poll or, like a good reporter, make an investigation in depth. But unless I am greatly mistaken, the strain of irreconcilability, which turns normal political controversy into a deadly poison, has declined.

There is a degree of unity and a mood of sobriety which is, of course, the real America underneath the passing frustrations of having to deal with a new and dangerous world.

A radical right and a radical left we shall always have with us. But in a strong and stable country they are dangerous only when they infect considerable sections of the moderate centre. I may, of course, be mistaken. But I think the infection of extremism is not spreading and is, on the contrary, receding. I have been wondering why.

The leading factors have been, I think, the assassination of President Kennedy, the accession of Lyndon Johnson and the realization, after the Cuban confrontation and the test ban treaty, that nuclear war is not imminent and that Cuba, though a nuisance, is not a military danger. Last, but not least, I would put on the list the open candidacy of Barry Goldwater.

Shocked to Senses

The murder of President Kennedy shocked the country into a realization of what can happen if violence is unrestrained. At the same time, it removed a President who was enormously admired and extravagantly hated. The country feels very much at home with the Johnson family, and it has been greatly reassured by the competence with which the Vice-President took over.

The calming effect of the nuclear detente, which may well have been the crowning achievement of President Kennedy, has lessened with the feeling of confidence that Lyndon Johnson is a prudent, old-fashioned American who has no taste for gambling and foreign adventure.

And then there is the constructive contribution of Barry Goldwater. As long as he was not out in the open running for President, he was free to say all kinds of dashing things that caught various people's fancy. But to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for President of the United States is quite different from holding forth in the locker room of a country club. Serious people have now taken a serious look at the senator's remarkable books and speeches, and they are now being subjected to full public exposure.

Great Service

The senator is doing a great service to the country. It is like that done by a vivid cartoon in a confused political controversy. He impersonates, and is parading before the voters' eyes, the eternal juvenile who lurks in the American soul. This boy who won't grow up refuses to live in a world which does not obey his wishes. He will not believe that he has adversaries whom he cannot dominate or that he has friends whom he must live with though they do not agree with him.

This unquenchable boy is sure that whatever goes against his wishes is the work of a villain or a traitor. He does not doubt that every problem has a solution, that is to say, his solution. For him, all conflicts and disputes must end either in victory or defeat. All is black that isn't altogether white, for history has taught him nothing. It has not taught him that in many of the great religious and ideological conflicts of mankind there has been no victory, no defeat, no solution and no settlement — only an unly living with the unsettled business.

Since we as a people have to put away the eternal boy in ourselves if we are going to move successfully in a world we do not own or control, and among people who do not have to love us because we are almost always right, I rejoice at the signs I have seen that the country will follow the President as he puts away childish things.

On this cheery note, I have returned from my vacation. Copyright (c) 1964, Washington Post Co.

INSIDE POLITICS

With Douglas Fisher, M.P.

Three major policy decisions of the Pearson Government will grow into major items of controversy this year. An indication of the heat intrinsic in two of them is that the policy, as outlined before legislation, is already compromised. The three: reform of the Senate; the measures to protect Canadian magazines; the take-over by Mitchell Sharp of ministerial responsibility for the World Fair project in Montreal.

Senate reform talk is such a bore, because it has exercised every generation since Confederation. Almost everyone, including the radical left, has accepted the cynical use of the institution by the reigning prime minister as being either practical or a typical Canadian sham that partisan politics forces us to bear. A seeming golden hour of the Senate during the Coyne affair gave conservative people some support in the argument that the Senate had a legislative use, as distinct from its function as a handy side-track for the hack or the politician whose future was great in the past.

Since the Coyne melodrama I have followed Senate proceedings more closely. This has not caused me to alter my personal opinion, which is also New Democrat policy, that the Senate should be abolished.

There is an oddity that should be noted about the Pearson reform. In future, any senator appointed would know that he must retire at age 75. But any present senator could retire on his death with his $15,000 a year. If he should wish. The latter qualification should make the proposal acceptable in personal terms to the present old men. But my survey of Senate performance indicates that age has little to do with either effort or quality.

Oldster Is Busiest

Senator Arthur Roebuck is 10 years over the proposed retirement age. He is just about the busiest and most effective of all senators. Two of my colleagues, Frank Howard and Arnold Peters, have had differences with Senator Roebuck over divorce, and mutual opinions are nasty. Yet they acknowledge he is a powerful operator.

Two other very elderly senators, Crerar (87) and Horner (79) are much less influential but very regular in attendance and comments. For example, they are much more active than much newer, younger senators like David Walker or Orville Phillips. Senator Power (75) and Senator Inor (78) have been keen participants in recent months. In fact, these senators prove that age may be a simple criterion to apply but a stupid criterion when related to quality. Most of the good senators were either excellent members of Parliament or busy, able men in public affairs.

On magazines, the key proposal of the O'Leary report was a tough restriction on the two American magazines, Time and Reader's Digest, which now skip 49 per cent of the magazine advertising market with their "Canadian" editions. This has been dropped. In effect Time and Reader's Digest are to be canonized as "Canadian" magazines.

This part of the magazine proposals will have a rough passage in the House. It looks like the one item which is almost certain to bid elements of all the opposition parties together. Many politicians are wondering what happened to the fierceness with which Maclean-Hunter executives Cy Laurin and Floyd Chalmers used to call for restrictions on the big two.

Threefold Explanation

The explanation is threefold, according to those other Canadian publishing interests who are still fighting. Firstly, Maclean-Hunter felt they were not going to get punitive action, particularly against Time, because of its enormous influence as generated through Washington. Secondly, a more serious threat loomed that the huge resources of mighty McGraw-Hill might move north into the Canadian trade publishing field. Since the Pearson proposals would block this, Maclean-Hunter has some protection. Thirdly, any kind of decision, so long as it was definite, was becoming of overriding importance because both ad agencies and advertisers were so uneasy over the government indecision. Better a poor decision than none at all.

It seems to me that the entry of Mitchell Sharp into the Montreal Fair project reflects the soaring confidence and ambition of the Toronto minister. It was whimsical that a recent biographical article on Mr. Sharp, authored by a nationally-known pundit, played up his quiet intellectualism and his sense of duty and responsibility. A sort of new saint among the politicians!

I like to think that I can spot the trusting politician, the man who hopes to go all the way. Mr. Sharp has taken this risky plunge into the tricky currents of Quebec and Drapeau politics. Further, he has attacked the West's beloved Alvin Hamilton with ridicule—right in the West. It's worth remembering Mr. Sharp during all the chatter about the emergence of Guy Favreau as the Crown Prince. It is too early to tell much, but Mr. Favreau does not look overpowering, whereas Mr. Sharp may do just that.

GOVERNMENT SPENDING HIGHER, RATES UNCHANGED

U.S. Tax Slash Cuts No Ice With Gordon

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Gordon, apparently, isn't taking his lead from Washington in budget techniques.

Though the stated goals are the same—economic growth and a cut in budget deficits—the paths of the Canadian and United States governments follow widely different routes.

President Johnson's budget calls for a $500,000,000 cut in administrative spending in the next fiscal year and Congress has approved a tax slash of more than $11,000,000,000. The president estimates that the economic stimulus given by the tax cut will boost revenues by $4,600,000,000 to $90,000,000,000. The net result forecast: A halving of the U.S. deficit to $4,900,000,000 in fiscal 1964-65.

Though Mr. Gordon's budget for next fiscal year is yet to be presented, its likely outlines are shaping up.

The basic spending program for 1964-65 presented to Parliament Tuesday clearly calls for higher spending. The preliminary total spending figures—subject to later change—are up $47,000,000 from the comparable figure for 1963-64. Moreover, the signs and hints dropped by the finance minister all indicate his budget will leave tax rates largely unchanged.

Why the differences in approach?

Mr. Gordon has given some reasons in recent speeches and press conferences.

The U.S. government is counting on tax cuts to stimulate the American economy, Mr. Gordon told a Washington press conference that this would help the Canadian economy too.

While both Ottawa and Washington administrations have emphasized the need of reducing their budget deficits, Mr. Gordon's view has been that the government here must look to economic growth to boost revenues and reduce the deficit.

WEEKEND WEATHER PICTURE ACROSS CANADA

SYNOPSIS — Low pressures are maintaining showery weather on the coast and occasional snowflurries in the southern interior. Clear Arctic air penetrated the Cariboo country and dropped the temperature to four below at Prince George Thursday night. This colder air is expected to continue its southward movement bringing clear skies and colder temperatures to most of southern B.C. by Saturday night. Meanwhile a Pacific disturbance entering the Gulf of Alaska will swing southeastward and spread rain to the north coast region by Saturday afternoon.

BATTLE JOINED

Haida War Party To Go to Alaska

The "Battle of the Haidas" B.C. Government ferry link is on as groups in Victoria and Washington State jockey for favor with Alaska on the proposed "Route of the Haidas" marine highway to Alaska.

DELEGATION

Latest move planned is a delegation to Alaska from Vancouver Island and Washington chambers of commerce.

The delegation was proposed Thursday night by Victoria chamber's tourist industry group.

Support for the Route of the Haidas—which includes a Vancouver Island highway joining the Prince Rupert ferry at Kelsey Bay—has come from the Anacortes Chamber.

This is in the face of opposition from an all-out Bellingham bid for a direct Bellingham-Alaska ferry.

DIRECT ROUTE

Island promoters fear the direct sea route would seriously affect the Route of the Haidas, and make the planned Prairie Migrants Jobless in B.C.

Saskatchewan migrants were blamed for unemployment in B.C. and the government was warned about latent Communist leadership of organized labor in lively exchanges in the legislature Thursday.

John Squire (NDP—Alberta) charged Social Credit labor laws are thwarting B.C. union leaders in responsible conduct of their affairs.

"You might as well know it," he intoned. "Look for insurrection by the Red element... the type of leadership there was 15 years ago," when the International Woodworkers of America turned out left wing-ers.

Debate was on Labor Minister Leslie Peterson's salary vote.

Some Are 'Beyond Educating'

"That's the way it should be," said a voice on the government side.

"Who made that smart remark?" Mr. Squire demanded.

This type of statement was "ridiculous," there should be steps taken to help chronic unemployment, Mr. Nimsick said.

"Education, not charity," Point Grey School Board member tossed in.

Mr. Nimsick countered that education is not the cure-all for the problem, although it does help. But there should not have of "stubble jumpers from Saskatchewan."

New Democrat Leo Nimsick (NDP—Cranbrook) accused the government of spending vast sums to eliminate tolls on Deas Thoroughway, for example, while doing nothing for the unemployed.

"Don't let the people rot in social welfare," he implored.

He pointed to the loss of jobs through automation, as in mining. Although mining production in B.C. is up, less than half as many people are employed, as there were a few years ago, he said.

to be charity, either, he said. The people he meant are "beyond educating."

"It is never too late," retorted Mr. Lofmark.

"It is easy for those who have gone through university to look down on people on welfare, the unemployed employables," Mr. Nimsick said.

"Would you scrap our vocational schools?" said Donald Brothers (SC—Rossland-Trail).

"There's another dud remark from a man with a university education," Mr. Nimsick fairly exploded.

Gov't Benches 'Missed Point'

At this point Donald Robinson (SC—Lillooet) rose threateningly, waving a finger.

"Social Credit has done more for the working man, for organized labor in B.C. than any other government," he said.

His backbenches slapped their desks vigorously while the opposition let out a dismal groan.

"Don't come around and tell us we've not been for the working man," he said.

He referred to work created by the extension of Pacific Great Eastern Railway at a time when the CPR was laying men off. The new route opened up mining and logging ventures that in turn employed men, he said.

Mr. Squire said the point had been completely missed by the government benches.

The government can go on creating industry, but unless something else is done it will not be helping the type of people referred to by Mr. Nimsick, he said.

"All the education in the world will not solve all the problems my friend is talking about," Mr. Squire said.

Many of the unemployed are 50 and 60 years old; some can't speak English, "and you're talking about sending them back to school for re-training."

Bellingham Keen for Own Ferry Link

SEATTLE (AP)—If Alaska won't extend its state ferry system south, Bellingham leaders may seek private backing for a passenger ship to sail between that Washington port and Prince Rupert, B.C.

Thomas J. Glenn, manager of the Port of Bellingham, and N. A. Lidstone, manager of the Bellingham Chamber of Commerce, said here Thursday they will "investigate all avenues" for tying their port to the Alaska ferry system.

Glenn and Lidstone made the comments after a meeting of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce Alaska division.

Three Alaska ferries operate between Prince Rupert on the south and Haines and Skagway on the north. Gov. William A. Egan has expressed interest in suggestions that Alaska extend the system south. Egan and other officials, however, have indicated reluctance to lengthen the route and thus reduce the frequency of the ferries' runs.

Fred H. Toland, traffic consultant, said a study showed Alaska could increase revenue and its year-round passenger and cargo business by making Bellingham the southern terminus of its system.

Grant Sought For Retarded

Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded asked city finance committee Thursday for a grant in lieu of taxes on its Elford Street occupational centre.

The taxes last year were $309.

"The work is growing so fast it is impossible to predict our needs," executive director Mrs. Winnifred M. Clark told the committee. "We knew the Community Chest grant would be inadequate and we are now looking for what other help we can get."

On-Job Lessons Curb Drop-Outs

Classrooms moved out into the community of Santa Barbara county, California, when a "work experience" education program was introduced there in 1953.

Drop-outs have been drastically reduced and 50 per cent of the students find employment through the program, said the program's director Cedric Boeseke.

Mr. Boeseke was speaking at a public session of Greater Victoria Teacher's Association convention which officially opened this morning at Victoria High School.

THREE-PART

The three-part work experience program provides the student an opportunity to get an education at the same time as he gains experience in an employment field.

Two programs are geared to the student who is working on a part-time basis. The third operates on an exploratory basis without pay.

In the exploratory work experience education program the student is allowed to discover his aptitudes and interests in a variety of work situations.

If a student decides in his last two years of high school he would like to be a lawyer, arrangements are made whereby he or she will spend two hours every day of one semester in a lawyer's office.

CLOSE LIAISON

Since the program started a close liaison has been built up between the education department and the employment services and business community, said Mr. Boeseke.

The entire county has become the students' laboratory for studying the world of work.

Flexibility of the total program gives more students the opportunity to continue an educational program while gaining work experience.

Only the top 13 per cent of the high school graduates are admitted to the University of California.

Those with a "B" average are admitted at state colleges and drop-out students are given one opportunity to continue their education at city colleges. But they must show reasonable progress to stay.

The percentage of drop-outs for the United States is between 25 and 45. In California it is 25 and in Santa Barbara county it is even less.

Every possible effort is made to help the drop-out student receive an education and necessary training for work, said Mr. Boeseke.

20 Persons Sue Police In Toronto

TORONTO (CP)—More than 20 civil actions are pending against members of the Metropolitan Toronto police department, it was learned Thursday.

C. O. Bick, chairman of the Metro Police Commission, said in an interview he believed the rash of actions stemmed from a recent case in Santa, Ont., in which a man and his son were awarded $88,791 from a police constable.

He said the outbreak of civil actions would not have a permanent effect on the morale of the 2,400-man Metro force.

He labelled as "grumbling" some suggestions that police officers were becoming afraid to make arrests for fear of being sued.

SOURCE OF SUPPLY WORRIES MP

Ookpik All-Canadian Owl

OTTAWA (CP)—Northern Affairs Minister Laing indicated in the Commons Thursday that Canadian, not American, opossum fur will be used for Canadian production of the Ookpik Eskimo toy owl.

Gordon Alken (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka) asked if American fur would be used.

Mr. Laing replied:

"There was a suggestion yesterday that American possum was being used. I think if the honorable member will make some inquiries he will find that this is a generic name for the animal and not the fur at all. I hope Canadian opossums are all Canadian."

Ookpik was designed by an Eskimo and displayed at Canadian trade fairs. An instant hit, it is being manufactured by Montreal and Toronto toy firms under licence with a share of the income going to an Eskimo co-operative.

TORONTO (CP)—Officials of the department of lands and forests in Ontario, the only Canadian province where opossums are found, said Thursday night the animal does not exist in large numbers.

Douglas Omand, of the Ontario department, said: "There aren't enough of them to make regulations. I have seen the odd one along the north shore of Lake Erie, but there aren't enough that they ever get listed on any of the Canadian fur auctions."

The animal is common in the United States, especially the tropical parts. It is found in Canada only in southern Ontario.

NEXT STOP VANCOUVER FOR MARKET GARDENERS

Some Saanich market gardeners are thinking of moving to Vancouver, according to the provincial agriculture department.

The sprawl of urban development is forcing them farther and farther out along the Saanich Peninsula, says the department's annual report, tabled in the legislature Thursday.

Some may move to the mainland to be closer to the market for their produce, it adds.

Mungo's Spirit Lives on Among Kwakiutls

By HUMPHRY DAVY

The spirit of Mungo Martin, famous Indian artist and totem pole carver who died in Victoria two years ago, is very much alive among his people—the Kwakiutls—on the east coast of northern Vancouver Island.

The chief's life-long teachings to preserve what little remained of ancient culture and traditions are beginning to bear fruit among young and old of the tribe.

I attended a performance of Indian dance and exhibition of native crafts at Port Hardy last weekend. There was plenty of evidence of a renaissance of Kwakiutl culture.

The beauty and excellence of the dances by 15 performers dressed in striking button and cheilant blankets was worthy of being staged in world capitals.

Many in the audience shared my view. It was a corp de ballet masterfully executing dances which told the stories and legends of their forefathers.

This dance team, I thought could contribute to a ceremony to be held in Victoria this spring to honor the great chief for his contribution to Canadian culture. He is to receive the coveted Canada Council medal posthumously.

Later I visited Mungo's birthplace at Fort Rupert, a few miles south of Port Hardy, where many of his relatives still live.

This was once the site of a large village of 3,000 inhabitants, but the smallpox outbreaks of 1860 and 1870 and the influenza epidemic of 1918-19, decimated the population. Today there are about 100 persons.

The great cedar planked lodges and the superbly designed canoes for which the Kwakiutl people were once famous, no longer are seen in the village.

All that remains of Fort Rupert, built in 1849, is a stone chimney.

As I tried to visualize the scene at Fort Rupert 100 years ago, an elderly man with a slight stoop and cane in hand approached me.

I said Mungo was a great man and there should be a memorial to show that he was born at Fort Rupert.

He paused thoughtfully before replying.

"We don't need that," he said. "His spirit is everywhere, everywhere."

This I knew to be true in the land of the Kwakiutl.

INDIAN DANCES are one of many cultural activities being revived by Kwakiutl tribe on north Vancouver Island where carver Chief Mungo Martin was born.

Profit? Not Much Says Headmaster

The public is still prejudiced against private or independent schools, Ned Larsen, headmaster of Shawnigan Lake Boys' School, said in Victoria Wednesday.

Speaking to Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce, he said prejudice stems from five sources:

People believe independent schools are put to make a profit; persons who cannot afford their fees develop a resentment; the public believes independent school teachers are less competent than those in public schools; independent schools create a "type," and many believe they are undemocratic.

Mr. Larsen said private schools are profit-making institutions only in isolated cases.

RUN AS TRUSTS

He added they are operated as educational trusts by boards of governors who work without pay.

Fees are charged because private schools do not receive government grants.

"Until the time comes when governments are sufficiently enlightened to give us assistance, we do all we can by way of scholarships."

61 ON BURSARIES

"Of the 225 boys at Shawnigan, 61 were provided with bursaries," he said.

He told the Jaycees people criticize private schools' teaching standards because some of their teachers have not taken

Agriculture Worth $150 Million

Agriculture in B.C. last year was a $150,000,000 industry, with gains in nearly all crops but grain, hit by drought in the Peace River region.

The annual report of the provincial agriculture department, tabled in the legislature Thursday, said total income was $150,146,000 — down $1,500,000 from the record total of 1962.

However, production generally was "well-maintained and even increased in some instances, notably in apples and eggs — the latter reaching an all-time record."

Farm prices remained generally steady, although "a definite softening occurred in cattle prices during the year," the report said.

RESIDENTS of the Langford-Cowichan-Metchosin area will meet Monday night in Belmont High School to weigh the advisability of forming an organized district or municipality. Speakers will be Herbert Bruch, MLA for Esquimalt, and John Williams, chairman of the Sooke School District 62.

GIGGLING TEACHER SCOLDED

Comox Social Credit MLA Dan Campbell was ticked off Thursday for giggling like "a child" in the legislature.

William Hartley (NDP-Yale) climaxed a 50-minute speech about health with a sharp reprimand about chattering and laughing from the Sacred benches.

He turned on Mr. Campbell, a teacher.

"He giggles as a child. There he is — an employee of a public institution. I'm surprised men who have a standard of ethics can smile at a time like this."

Storm Lashes Eastern Canada

Winds, Snow, Hail, Fog
From Ontario to the Sea

By The Canadian Press

A storm packing winds of more than 100 miles an hour pounded Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes Thursday.

Heavy snow fell in Northern Ontario and pelting rain, snowflurries and hail lashed southern Ontario and Quebec.

Eight aircraft and 35 seal hunters were missing in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Winds gusted to 110 miles an hour in Montreal, highest ever recorded in the city.

Fog and strong winds forced airports at Halifax, Saint John, N.B., and Fredericton to restrict flights to emergency traffic only.

CUTS POWER LINES

In the Montreal area, squalls caused heavy damage to cottages, cut power lines, toppled trees and damaged two aircraft. No injuries were reported.

At Toronto's Island Airport in Lake Ontario, a wind meter registered gusts to 98 miles an hour.

In Windsor, two women were slightly injured when a wall collapsed against a beauty parlor as they sat beneath hair dryers.

Two of the Detroit-Windsor car ferries were trapped for three hours in the Detroit River when high waves prevented them from docking at either side. The trip usually takes 20 minutes.

Winds gusting through Ontario

rio's Kent County ripped half the roof off Chatham Memorial Community Centre. Chatham radio station CKCO was off the air twice for brief periods.

RADIO TOWERS FALL

An elderly Brantford, Ont., resident suffered a broken hip when knocked off his feet by winds estimated at 60 miles an hour. Three steel transmitter towers of Brantford radio station CKPC, one 214 feet tall, collapsed.

Nine persons were injured in the Hamilton area as winds toppled chimneys, utility wires and a church steeple.

Two Niagara Falls high school students were slightly injured when winds smashed a window in their classroom. Two men jumped to safety when a wall of a Stratford, Ont., building they were wrecking collapsed in the wind. The falling wall knocked down power lines and part of downtown Stratford was without electricity for five hours.

Two construction workers were injured in Toronto when a concrete block wall fell on them.

Strong winds in Northern Ontario were accompanied by as much as 14 inches of snow, isolating several communities.

'HOLE LARGE AS FOOTBALL'

TCA Airliner Hit By Lightning

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Trans-Canada Air Lines Vanguard carrying 56 passengers and a crew of five made a normal landing Thursday night at Vancouver International Airport after being hit by lightning over neighboring New Westminster.

The lightning strike cracked the fiberglass radar cover on the nose of the four-engine turbo-prop plane and punched a hole in the cover about the size of a large football.

The plane, Flight 505, was inbound to Vancouver from Toronto via Winnipeg, Regina and Calgary.

A TCA spokesman said: "Capt. Vic Wills of West Vancouver said he was on descent in to Vancouver International Airport and was breaking through a cloud when there was a blue flash and a thunder-like noise."

"Capt. Wills informed the 56 passengers that the aircraft had been hit by lightning."

"He made a normal landing at Vancouver Airport. When the aircraft stopped on the ramp the maintenance crews found that the fiberglass radar cover had sustained a crack and there was a hole in it about the size of a large football."

PARALYSIS HITS BEES

Bees in southern British Columbia, hit by a disease involving paralysis, produced honey last year at a rate only two-thirds the provincial average.

The annual report of the agriculture department tabled in the legislature Thursday, said the province's 24,300 bee colonies produced a record 1,839,000 pounds of honey.

But bee colonies in the southern half of the province produced an average of only 50 pounds of honey, compared with the provincial average of 75 pounds.

'B.C. Loads Scales Against Workers'

B.C. loads the scales against the working man in any grievance to the labor department, Opposition leader Robert Strachan complained in the legislature Thursday.

And the amount of Labor Minister Leslie Peterson's salary vote is an indication of what the government's labor policies are worth, he further charged. Mr. Peterson, paid as minister of education, gets nothing for his labor portfolio.

Debate on the salary vote Thursday night ended a sitting that brought sparks showering down on both sides of the House until the vote passed at 9:30.

MLA Proposes Pension Plan Tightening Up

Provincial control over pension plans was advocated in the legislature Thursday by Opposition member Tony Gargrave (NDP-Mackenzie) during debate on labor estimates.

He noted pension plans in the U.S. buy up half of stock market issues, and together with mutual funds account for most of the investment.

In B.C., although industrial workers contribute heavily to pension plans, there is no regulation, he said.

For one thing, there should be full disclosure of internal workings of plans, their management and who really owns the pension funds to which management and labor contribute.

And there should be unassailable and unattachable pension rights established, he said.

Refugees Relocated

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The Cuban refugee centre has reported that 75,000 exiles have been relocated from Miami to other American cities. About 100,000 refugees still live in the Miami area.

Mr. Strachan said civil servants also feel the weight of loaded scales in relations with the government. He said the department discriminates against members of the official opposition as well.

Departmental officials have advised persons with a grievance, such as a case for compensation, not to approach a member of the opposition if they want their matter to be taken up, he charged.

Despite the fact the labor force is increasing, the actual number of union members in B.C. is declining, Mr. Strachan said.

'A SHAMBLES'

"The trade union movement is going to be a shambles because we can't protect it under these labor laws," the opposition leader said.

"If you (the government) maintain your Victorian attitude in labor legislation and labor-management relations we're headed for even more trouble," Mr. Strachan said.

Mr. Strachan accused the department of having two standards or attitudes in enforcement of legislation—loose on application of overtime control and strong in measures favoring management.

"It is most unfair to accuse my department of being unfair in administration of labor legislation in the province," Mr. Peterson declared, defying members to give examples of unfairness.

Bakery Stock Climbs

Alec Bracks' smile appears to be wide today.

It has been a pleasant soccer season for Alec, manager of Brodies Bakery in the Victoria and District League's first division. His Bakers have been beaten only twice in 20 games, including cup matches.

That record is enough to keep any manager happy.

Now mention the Hamiltons and Alec's grin expands to new dimensions. Bill is the better known of the Hamilton boys. Former school boy international, the halfback-forward played briefly with Victoria United in the Pacific Coast League.

Then he transferred to Brodies, explaining soccer the United way. "Wasn't fun."

Now older brother Roy, fresh from Scotland, comes out to join Brodies. His performance in last weekend's Province Cup victory over Nainaimo was, to Bracks' way of thinking, simply great.

PLAY SATURDAY

Thus Brodies' stock in the soccer circles soars to a new high, especially when Province Cup activity is concerned.

Brodies confine their playing to District League activity Saturday, but it is a day Bracks can show off his newest player. Brodies play Kickers in the first division match at Royal Athletic Park.

Sunday's only first division activity is scheduled for Heywood Avenue Park. There, Gorge Hotel meets Canadian Scottish.

SECOND DIVISION

Three games are scheduled in the second division on the Sabbath. Oak Bay plays Wanderers at Topaz, Gorge meets King's at Beacon Hill while Kickers and Uvic Vikings tangle on the Gordon Head campus.

United, the Coast League side, won't be involved in league play this weekend but there will be plenty of local interest in PCSL results.

EXHIBITION CLASH

United fans will be waiting for the outcome of the North Shore New Westminster clash Saturday at Vancouver's Calister Park. The Shores trail Victoria by four points in the two-team struggle for the fourth playoff spot and could trim the margin to two points with a win.

In Sunday PCSL matches, wireless Wallaces play Firefighters and Columbus visits Seattle.

United will get in some work Sunday, meeting Victoria West in an exhibition fustle at Central Park.

Riley Tops Field

Mrs. G. Riley won the "A" division of the Uplands Golf Club medal round with a net 76 Thursday. "B" division winner with a 72 was Mrs. R. Cranston. Mrs. J. Drummond and Mrs. B. Play tied for "C" division honors with 77s.

Record Field of 20

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — A record field of 20 horses were listed Thursday as definite starters in the $100,000-added San Juan Capistrano Handicap at Santa Anita Saturday.

Topping the eligibles is Mr. Consistency, winner of four races at the meeting.

SEMI TONIGHT

Viking Squad Busy

The puck-chasing students who call Victoria University "home" face a busy weekend.

Vikings have scheduled back-to-back games on Esquimalt Sports Centre ice tonight and Saturday. One's quite important and the other could be...

Duty call tonight sends Vikings against Queen's Own Rifles in the opening game of Esquimalt District League's best-of-three semifinal series.

Playoff action tonight is a double-barrelled affair. Paving the way at 7:45 is a similar series between Navy and the league-winning Pontiac Chiefs.

NELSON VISITS

Saturday, Vikings entertain the highly-regarded squad from Nelson's Notre Dame College.

"This," suggests Viking stalwart Douglas Bamforth, "could be the start of new intercollegiate conference."

The suggestion is that Uvic compete in a league embracing Notre Dame, UBC and Simon Fraser University (at Burnaby).

Faceoff time Saturday is 8 p.m.

The students, as always, plan to do it up big.

CITY TO HOST FIVEPIN FINAL FOR THE BLIND

Victoria's Loomer Lanes will host the fifth annual national final for blind fivepin bowlers.

The west's top totally-blind bowler will meet the best from the east for the TCA Trophy in a three-game series.

Capt. M. C. Robinson, western Canada director for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, who pioneered bowling for the blind in 1935, will officially open the playoff.

Single Point Good Enough To Snap Tie

Red Wings Help Chicago Cause By Upsetting Lackadaisical Habs

By The Canadian Press

Chicago finally has grabbed a one-point lead in the National Hockey League standings.

It looked for a while Thursday night as though neither the Hawks nor Montreal Canadiens wanted the leadership very badly. Chicago had to come from behind four times to tie Boston 4-4, while the disorganized Canadiens bowed 7-5 to Detroit.

They didn't look much like two teams that had been battling to break a first-place deadlock since mid-January.

Hawks now have 48 points with five games left to play in the regular schedule, while Canadiens have 77 with eight games to go.

The Detroit victory brought the Red Wings to within two points of Toronto's Maple Leafs, who hold down third spot, 12 points behind Montreal.

The Thursday night scoring spree in Montreal was a community effort for both teams, as no individual got more than one goal.

The Detroit marksmen were Irv Spencer, Bruce MacGregor, Doug Barkley, Floyd Smith, Gordie Howe, Parker MacDon-

Hodge's Edge Chopped to One Goal

Claude Provost, Bobby Rousseau, Jean Beliveau, Bernie Geoffrion and John Ferguson were the Montreal scorers.

Both goaltenders, Charlie Hodge for Montreal and Terry Sawchuk for Detroit, came up with 25 saves.

Hodge still leads in the goaltenders' race for the Vezina Trophy, but the seven-goal flurry reduced his lead over Chicago's Glenn Hall to one goal. Also, the rest of the scheduled works in Hall's favor since Chicago has only five games left.

In Boston, Bill (Red) Hay got the tying goal with less than four minutes left, while Boston had two men in the penalty box and Chicago was one man short.

Again the scoring was a team effort as only Boston's Qland Kurtenbach came up with two goals. Murray Oliver and Johnny Bucyk got the other.

'HE DIDN'T HAVE A CHANCE'

Bank Employees Capture Suspect

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two bank employees Thursday captured a suspect minutes after their downtown branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce was robbed of $1,000. Charged later with robbing the bank was Otto Edward Schneider, 25.

Assistant manager Gene Ochitwa and accountant Max Brownjohn started running after a man dressed in a bright shirt and dark suit when they heard teller Mrs. Joyce Jarvis say she had been held up. The two men chased the suspect from the bank and around the block shouting: "This is a bank holdup, stop that man." "No one stopped him until two young men blocked his path and we all converged on him," said Ochitwa. "He didn't stand a chance. He gave up without a struggle." A sum of money was seized from the suspect and he was returned to the bank where he was taken into custody by police.

The two bank employees actions came only three days after Imperial Commerce bank inspector George Binnie suggested employees do all they could to aid in the arrest of bank bandits without endangering their lives.

Another branch of the bank in the downtown area was robbed of $1,000 Monday.

COURTLY BOW END DEBATE

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson got off the big hook in 6½ hours in the legislature.

His departmental estimates were approved at Thursday night's sitting. The debate began Wednesday.

When the unexpectedly long debate ended, Mr. Peterson stood to give a bow of gratitude.

Atheists Given Adoption Rights By Toronto Group

TORONTO (CP)—The Toronto Children's Aid Society said Wednesday it will allow atheists and Jews to adopt babies of other faiths, effective immediately.

Lloyd S. Richardson, executive director of the society, said in his annual report the change results from a re-interpretation of the Child Welfare Act.

However, Roman Catholic children may still be adopted only by Roman Catholic parents and Catholics may adopt only Catholic children, as set out specifically in the act.

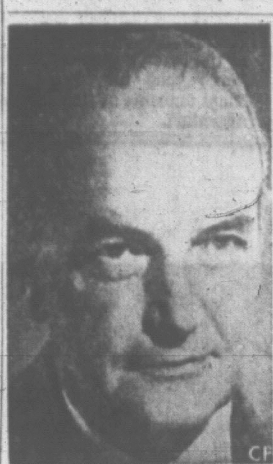

Compensation Probe Delay Hit by Nimsick

An interim report on B.C. workmen's compensation and higher indemnity for widows of men killed in industry were asked for in the legislature Thursday by Leo Nimsick (NDP—Cranbrook).

He noted there has been a long delay in appearance of a report by the royal commission on workmen's compensation, and perhaps it would be two years before it comes down.

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson, replying in debate on his salary estimate, said it was "most unfair of the member

GORDON MCGREGOR ... protect old name

TCA Chief Disagrees With Action

HALIFAX (CP)—Gordon R. McGregor, president of Trans-Canada Air Lines, said Thursday night he disagreed with a private bill now before the Senate to change the name of the air line to Air Canada.

He said he did not object to the actual change in name, but the bill did not provide for protection of the name Trans-Canada Air Lines.

He told the Halifax Board of Trade: "I know of two airlines who would grab the name up before you could turn around."

Mr. McGregor said Air Canada had been included and protected in the company's charter some years ago, and it was used sparingly in airline advertisements, especially in Europe.

He said "the Trans-Canada Air Lines is not at all protected in the bill."

USEFUL BUT NOT 'DEATH RAYS'

Ray Guns 'Not Weapons'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Army said Thursday that "ray guns" using the high energy laser beam are useful for several things, but not as weapons.

The army said Maser Optics Inc., of Boston, had delivered to an arsenal in Philadelphia what the army called a "hand-held, pulsed laser research instrument."

Laser means light amplification by stimulated emission of radiation and it enables a light beam to be concentrated so it will travel long distances.

The device, the army said, is being evaluated for use in such fields as survey, navigation, range-finding and simpler purposes.

The army added: "The capabilities described in news stories, such as the ability to ignite objects and to detonate explosives, are the same as many laser devices in laboratory use today."

"These characteristics have been evaluated by the army's development program for a and were determined to be too destructive instrument."

Name-Calling Shakes House

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Legislative Reporter

The legislature erupted into a free-for-all between "blackshirts" and "communists" Thursday.

The bitterest clash of the session led the House beyond its usual supper adjournment hour and extended the debate of labor department estimates into the night.

The chief characters of the drama were Premier W. A. C. Bennett who called a New Democrat "a communist leader," Tony Gargrave (NDP—Mackenzie) who called the premier a bully, and Herbert Bruch (SC—Esquimalt) who was branded a "blackshirt." The angriest MLA of all during the heated exchange was Labor Minister Leslie Peterson, who sat glowering because nobody would talk about his department.

It all began a few minutes before 6 p.m. when Mr. Bruch complained that trade union leaders should spend more time on the needs of their members than on politics.

'Take Your Seat,' Premier Told

Mr. Gargrave rose to reply just as the premier walked into the House.

Mr. Bennett made an inaudible remark.

"You take your seat—you've been absent all day," Mr. Gargrave shouted.

"We've had enough black-shirted ideas from the member for Esquimalt without bullying tactics from the premier."

When the premier continued to toss barbs (laughing to the Socreds behind him) Mr. Gargrave told him: "Mr. Premier will you please keep out of this argument."

Up jumped the premier, branding Mr. Gargrave "this communist leader."

A dire warning from House chairman William Speare brought a withdrawal of the word blackshirt from Mr. Gar-grave and of the word communist from Mr. Bennett.

But Mr. Gargrave renewed his charge that the premier was bullying. The sooner this was exposed, the more orderly the debate would become, he said.

In the resulting pandemonium, Saanich Socred John Tisdalle contributed: "The premier has never bullied me and I object."

"We had good sound orderly debate until the premier came in," complained Mr. Gargrave. "When he goes out the debate will go back to normal."

He charged Mr. Bruch had tried to tear down the good name of the IWA, of which Mr. Gargrave has been a member for 16 years.

Mr. Bennett said the New Democrat was rabble-rousing.

Department Ignored—Peterson

Mr. Speare demanded a more responsible attitude toward the labor debate.

Mr. Peterson, scowling, kept demanding the MLAs return to his vote.

As 6 p.m. passed, John Squire (NDP—Alberni) suggested an adjournment.

Mr. Bennett replied the Social Credit leader was "not taking instructions from you, my friend."

Mr. Squire said in that case he had enough material to keep the labor debate going for weeks.

Mr. Speare ruled that the 6 p.m. adjournment rule does not apply during committee sittings—debate on estimates. Mr. Gargrave challenged the ruling, and was defeated on a voice vote.

Mr. Squire said he had thought legislative debate had reached a higher level.

Mr. Peterson complained again. His department was being ignored.

At this point Waldo Skillings (SC—Victoria) told the NDP: "You're going to keep the debate going until the pallbearers return."

Opposition Leader Robert Strachan, NDP House leader Arthur Turner and Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) were away all afternoon attending the funeral of Angus MacInnis, a CCF founder and veteran MP.

Randolph Harding (NDP—Kaslo-Slocan) finally brought things down to earth with a calm question about labor matters.

"It's rather refreshing," replied Mr. Peterson wryly.

Mr. Gargrave made a quiet plea for adjournment.

"Any request that's made in a nice manner, the premier is always glad to accept," said Mr. Bennett with a smile. He adjourned the House.

YOUNGSTERS FIND $80,000 ROBBERY LOOT

PRINCE GEORGE (CP)—Two youngsters hunting for bottles in a ditch have uncovered nearly $80,000 worth of non-negotiable documents from a 1961 robbery.

The buried loot, consisting of government cheques and licence plates, assorted papers and $10 change, was discovered by two nine-year-old boys. They were collecting bottles beside the Cariboo Highway, near Alexandria, 20 miles south of Quesnel.

Missing from a canvas sack was some $750 cash taken in the robbery of Quesnel government offices, February 26, 1961.

Sharing Of Profits Urged In B.C.

Profit-sharing schemes by B.C. firms were urged in the legislature Thursday by Liberal leader Ray Perrault.

"Labor feels it is not sharing in the rewards of the system," Mr. Perrault said.

In the age of automation there is no sense of personal accomplishment for push-button workers.

"Human dignity and human aspiration often suffer to a very great extent," he said.

Industry has become too mechanical. There would be fewer strikes if labor was allowed to participate in the profits, Mr. Perrault said.

He proposed federal tax incentives and provincial guidance and leadership to promote profit-sharing plans, which have proved very successful in the U.S.

Mr. Perrault also advocated higher salaries and more staff in the labor department's conciliation service.

Present salaries of $4,000 to $8,000 are not enough to attract "blue ribbon" conciliators who can save the public millions of dollars by solving major labor disputes, Mr. Perrault said.

TOTEM UNVEILING FRIDAY AT BUENOS AIRES EMBASSY

A 65-foot totem pole carved here in Thunderbird Park by chief carver Henry Hunt and his son Tony Hunt, was unveiled in Canada Square, Buenos Aires, today.

Mayor Francisco Rabanal of Buenos Aires presided at the ceremony and the Air Force band played the national anthems of Canada and Argentina.

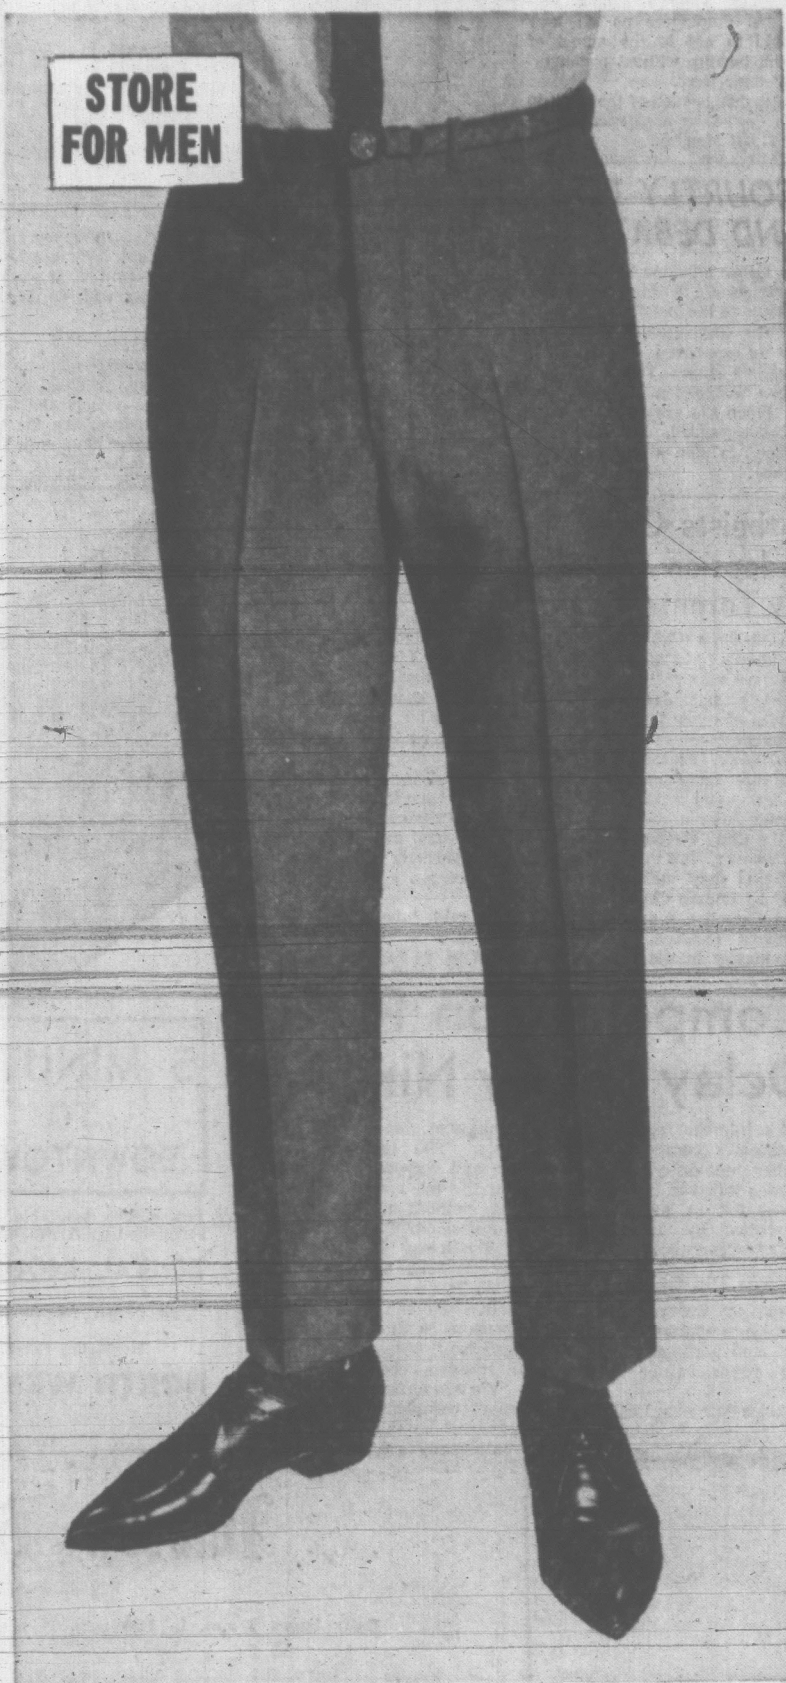

Designed by Henry Hunt, the totem was commissioned by the Canadian Embassy in Buenos Aires and financed by a group of Canadian businessmen who do business with the Argentine. The idea grew out of the fact that in 1961 Buenos Aires named one of its many beautiful squares in honor of Canada.

Carved in Kwakiutl style, the totem tells the same story as the tallest totem pole in the world in Beacon Hill Park, which was designed by Chief Mungo Martin and carved by the chief, his son, David Martin, and his son-in-law Henry Hunt, in 1956.

Friends Protecting Escapee, Say Police

Tell-Tale Thefts Haven't Shown Up

Saanich police suspect escaped convict Richard Rodriguez is being protected by friends.

Rodriguez has now been at large since last Friday without police finding any trace of him.

Police think Rodriguez has obtained help because there has been no report of any break-ins where food or clothing was taken.

Escapees usually resort to break-ins to obtain food and change of clothing.

Police pointed out anybody who helps an escapee is liable to a maximum term of one year in jail.

Rodriguez broke out of prison along with Frank Carlow who later gave himself up to police after telling The Times about what he described as sub-standard conditions in the jail.

SHORT OUTING COSTS MAN $169, RADIO

A man who left his house for only three hours early Thursday night returned to find it broken into and $169 cash missing.

Walter Lisetz, 501 Richmond, also lost a $24 radio to the thieves who entered through a basement window. The place was ransacked.

Mrs. Lisetz had cashed a pay cheque earlier in the day and didn't have time to bank the money. She locked it in a cupboard.

Burglars, who attempted to break into Kee's Market, 4101 Shelbourne, were apparently scared off empty-handed early today.

Mathematics 'Lazy Boy's Subject'

Mathematics is for the lazy boys — they look for the easy way to find the answer.

And mathematics should be taught so that it encourages this type of thinking, Dr. E. D. Nichols, head of the mathematics education department of Florida State University, said here today.

Dr. Nichols was speaking to 800 teachers this morning at the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association convention.

Teachers, he said, must inspire students with the desire to explore and investigate new avenues in the field of mathematics.

WHAT FOR? If a student asks "What is it good for?" he is really saying "I don't understand it and don't like it."

New emphasis in education is on how a subject should be taught, not what is taught, said Dr. Nichols as he described the recent developments in mathematics.

Now educationists realize that children can learn much more at an early age than was previously thought possible, if taught by new methods.

"We have entered an era when the curriculum is constantly being revised and not set for a 20-year period at a time," he said.

New problems are constantly being written to keep up with the maturity level of the student.

Mathematics is not so much concerned with minute skills but rather it is more concerned with abstract patterns. As it is taught it must reflect the underlying principles of the art (not a science, says Dr. Nichols) and it must leave the student with the desire to discover new solutions.

Mathematics is a living and growing subject and mathematicians are now working on clearing up its language so it can become the precise art it is alleged to be.

The convention was officially opened this morning by Mrs. A. B. Thompson, chairman of the Greater Victoria School Board; John Gough, superintendent of schools; Rudy Kaser, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Teachers, and Dave Unwin, chairman of the convention committee. It continues Saturday at Victoria Senior Secondary School.

$5 MILLION BOND ISSUE SOLD IN U.S.

The 20-year bonds will pay 4.75 per cent interest. They are payable in U.S. funds.

Almost Irresistible Force . . .

Pioneer Square was squarely hit at about 6 a.m. today by a motorist in a new car with only 640 miles on the speedometer, knocking over an historic stone marker and sending driver to hospital with facial cuts.

Police identified the driver as William S. Wylie, 450 Dallas. He was still in St. Joseph's Hospital at noon.

They said the car was seen going east on Broughton Street at a high rate of speed, through a stop sign at Quadra Street. The car went out of control, over the curb, and hit the rock.

The rock—four feet by four feet by five feet—was knocked over, and Mr. Wylie's car bounced over the rock, then slid down on its side.

First reports stated the overturned stone was the result of vandalism, but tire marks across the sidewalk, as shown in the photo, showed the car was on a dead straight line when it hit the stone.

Shattered bits of headlight glass were strewn about the grass on the far side of the marker.

The stone was engraved with details of the origin of Pioneer Square, which contains the graves of many of Victoria's early citizens.

One of them was seen to put two part bottles of beer under the car.

"Expensive beer," commented Magistrate William Ostler.

Ask The Times

Q. Who, originally, was far-sighted enough to set aside Beacon Hill as parkland for future citizens? R.C.

A. It was reserved for a public park by Governor James Douglas in 1858. In 1882 the provincial government gave the parkland to the city of Victoria in trust for the "use, recreation and enjoyment of the public."

Development of the park dates from 1889 when a loan of $25,000 was approved by ratepayers. John Blair, a Scottish landscape architect, won a prize for the best development plan and was named to head the project.

The same year 2,000 trees and shrubs were donated by a group of local citizens.

Q. What was the name of the theatre that used to be located on Fort Street between Douglas and Blanshard sometime early in the century? F.E.F.

A. It was called the Philharmonic Hall.

DAWDYS DAWDLED

Tom Cat-apults Ahead of Family

By LESLIE MILLIN

A worried Calgary family arrived in Victoria this week to find their missing Tomcat had pussyfooted his way here ahead of them—in style.

The travelling Tom turned up missing when S. Dawdy and his family were preparing to leave Calgary for their new home in Victoria.

Furniture was loaded, suitcases packed—and Tom wasn't there.

After subjecting the nearby countryside to an intensive Tom-hunt they decided their prowling pet would have to be left behind, and the family headed west.

EVIDENCE Their furniture left Calgary on Monday, arrived here Thursday, and was being unloaded when movers noticed Unmistakable Signs.

They contacted the SPCA—and inspector Oscar Vennberg dug Tom out of the family davenport.

He'd travelled the 600 miles in his own personal Pullman car.

GOOD SHAPE Tom checked in at the SPCA where secretary Dave Beeching reported him to be black, white, and perfectly healthy.

When the Dawdy family arrived very shortly, Tom was rested and ready to greet them.

They thought he was a gone cat because he'd split that prairie scene first—but this was the Tom that cut out by himself.

WIDOW GIVES $100 "One woman who had applied for a war widow's pension gave us $100 when it came through as it was retroactive to 15 months."

"She said in her letter she had been living on welfare and she had three children under four years of age when her husband died of congenital heart disease," Mrs. Barry said.

Eighty-five per cent of campaign funds will go towards research of heart and other circulatory diseases and education of the public.

Remainder is made up of 7 per cent for administration and 8 per cent campaign costs.

Langford Branch No. 60, Old Age Pensioners Organization, will meet Monday for an auction at 2 p.m. in Cade Memorial Hall.

Tidal Survey To Start On Tuesday

The United States department of commerce will start an extensive nine-month tidal survey in Pacific Northwest waters Tuesday.

The study will strengthen existing tidal current tables to aid mariners and will help in planning bridge construction and dredging operations.

Two ships, the Bowle and the Hodgson, will be used in the survey which will obtain the times of slack water and time, direction and velocity of flood and ebb currents at 90 locations in the Puget Sound area.

Each vessel is 136 feet long, has a displacement of 267 tons and carries a crew of four officers and 24 men.

Points near Victoria where current data will be gathered are Race Rocks and the San Juan Islands.

Chess Champion To Be Seen Against Crowd

Vancouver Island chess champion Olavi Sarakannas will take on all chess players simultaneously in an exhibition at the Hudson Bay's Douglas Room, 12 noon to 5 p.m.

The exhibition is being sponsored by the Victoria City Chess Club.

Results of the tournament play currently underway at the Westholme Hotel leaves Mr. Sarakannas still in the lead with 12 games in his pocket and Charles Birch second with nine wins.

Heart Fund Leaps Over Target

Victoria and Vancouver Island branch of the B.C. Heart Foundation saw its campaign go over the top today with donations amounting to $30,580.

Target was $30,000.

The month-long campaign ended Feb. 29 "but we still have people coming into the office to make donations and we expect mail to continue for another two or three weeks," said Island secretary Mrs. Mae Barry.

'WE'LL MAKE OUT SOMEHOW, I GUESS'

Odd-Job Man Loses Tools as House Guttled

Fire that gutted an uninsured Patricia Bay home early this morning left a family of three homeless, jobless and with only the clothes they wore.

Harry Jones left the five-room house on the Union Bay Indian reserve with his two young sons Thursday evening after dinner to visit his brother about half a mile from their home at 10355 West Saanich Road.

When he returned after midnight, the little frame house was a flaming torch that took firemen three hours to extinguish.

This morning, only a black hulk of a house looks out on to Patricia Bay.

Although no one was home, there were casualties—everything the family owned, Mr. Jones' means of making his living, and a goldfish.

Mr. Jones does odd jobs around Patricia Bay and Deep Cove.

All his tools—including a big investment, his power saw—were destroyed.

The origin of the fire is still unknown—and a mystery to Mr. Jones.

"We had a cold supper last night," he said.

"The stove was only on long enough to heat the kettle. It wasn't on for much of the day."

"We came down to my brother Sandy's, and when we were going home after midnight there was this big light down the road, and the kids thought the house might be on fire."

"We ran down, and it was."

Sidney volunteer fire department got the alarm about 12:30, and sent a 12-man crew.

The blaze was so fierce firemen could not determine where the fire started.

Firemen tried to save a few possessions from the flames, but heat drove them back.

"I don't know what we're going to do now," Mr. Jones said.

He and his sons Harry and Hayward stayed with his brother Sandy overnight, but they can't stay there much longer.

With no insurance to cover the loss, he's not sure which way to turn.

His brother Sandy Jones, 10429 West Saanich, hopes to collect a few household items to keep the family going. They may be able to find another house on the reservation.

"We'll make out somehow, I guess," says Mr. Jones.

Harry Jones and Harry Jr. . . . supper was cold.

"I used to run barefoot through that stuff when I was a boy—and I can recommend it very highly."

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Standing On Feet All Day Can Cause Varicose Veins

Q. "I am a 19-year-old girl. Due to my job, I stand on my feet all day long, usually eight or nine hours a day. During the last year the veins in my legs have become very noticeable, more like varicose veins. Please tell me if these can be caused by my standing all day? Is there any way to prevent these?"

A. Varicose veins can be caused by standing a lot. Whenever you have a chance take short rest periods with your feet elevated. Walk around the room periodically. If you stand on a concrete or stone floor have a little wooden platform built and stand on that. It is probably also a good idea to wear stockings which give you some support. Ask your doctor about this. Also avoid tight clothing such as round garters.

Q. "I am 17 years old and it is very important that I improve my appearance before I graduate from high school and go out into the business world. I am 5-feet, 1-inch tall and weigh 117 pounds. I measure 35-24-38 inches. I know I am overweight and need to lose inches, but how much of each? What colors will make me look smaller? I have to eat what the rest of the family has and I make my own clothes."

A. If you have a medium build you are not overweight but if your frame is very light, you should lose around 12 pounds. Concentrate on hip slimming exercises for a loss of an inch or so in that measurement. You can eat a well-balanced diet like the rest of your family. Just leave off the trimmings such as desserts, gravy, cream, fat meat and fried foods. Cut down some on the carbohydrate foods and do not have "seconds."

Q. "Please answer this in your column as soon as possible because I am very depressed. You see, I am 17 and as yet have practically no bust. I am just starting to 'bud.' This is very disturbing to me. Although I wear a padded bra it still presents a problem physically and emotionally."

"I have heard of hormones and hormone creams, but they are so expensive. My mother doesn't realize how I feel, although I have told her. Can you suggest some exercises that will help me with my problem?"

A. Young women vary as to the time they develop a bust.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Be Blunt, Mother!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of an engagement where the couple has to sneak around like thieves to meet secretly because the boy's parents are opposed to the marriage, and he is afraid to face them with the facts? He swears he loves the girl, yet he has never taken her to a public place, and they have been going together for over a year. She has studied and gone to classes for months to take his religion, but, on Sundays when she sees him in church with his parents, he doesn't dare even to look in her direction. This girl could have her pick of many other boys, but she just sits home and waits for him to sneak away and see her. She is so in love with him it pains me to see her hurt like this. How can I help her?

THE GIRL'S MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER: You do not mention their ages. Or his educational or financial status. This is of utmost importance. If he is still dependent on his parents, announcing his engagement to a girl of whom they disapprove would end all help from them. If he loved the girl enough, and were a man, he'd do just that, and find a way to make it on his own. He is obviously unwilling, unable—or no man. Do your daughter a favor and tell her she is cheapening herself.

DEAR ABBY: My wife has started to talk so loud she is driving me crazy. When I remind her to tone down she starts to speak in almost a whisper, but before long she is yelling again. What should I do? We've been married almost 30 years.

GOING CRAZY.

DEAR GOING: Take your wife to a doctor who specializes in disorders of the ear. She could be suffering from a hearing loss and not know it.

DEAR ABBY: What would you have done if a case like this? My daughter-in-law had a birthday coming up, so I asked her in my most pleasant tone, "What would you like for your birthday, dear?" She looked me right in the eye and replied, "Give me the money instead, Mother. Your taste is atrocious!"

STRUCK SPEECHLESS.

DEAR STRUCK: I'd have given her a "taste" of an ignored birthday.

CONFIDENTIAL TO EDNA: Yes, I write all my own answers. A ghost writer hasn't a ghost of a chance with me. Get it off your chest. For a personal, unpublished reply, write to Abby, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Will It Be A Mother-Craft Birth?

By PAT DUFOUR

A new gambling craze has hit Great Britain. Thousands of Britishers are "taking a flyer" on the "Royal Stakes." Soccer pools are forgotten as they bet on whether the Queen's baby will be a boy or girl and try to guess the name the new arrival will be given.

Whatever the name or sex of the awaited infant, Miss Ruth Elliott of Cordova Bay is certain it will be a mothercraft child. She's been teaching mothercraft most of her adult life and says:

"The Queen Mother is our patron and the Royal Family has supported the movement ever since Sir Truby King founded it in London years ago."

Mothercraft teaches the skills required for healthy and natural childbirth and care of young children. There are branches in England, New Zealand, Scotland, Wales, New South Wales, South Australia, Queensland, Tasmania, South Africa, Israel, India, Jamaica and Canada.

It was through the inspiration of Miss Elliott that the Canadian training centre in Toronto came into being.

WELL TRAINED

Holding several child nursing certificates, including one in the Truby King method, Miss Elliott decided to leave her native Liverpool and come to Canada in the 1920s.

After several years on the prairies where she was the only nurse for miles, Miss Elliott decided to try her fortune in Toronto. By lucky chance the head doctor at the Hospital for Sick Children was the late Dr. Alan Brown, a paediatrician who had become enthused about mothercraft during his overseas studies.

Soon, Miss Elliott found herself given day nursery patients to care for and, what was more important, to use as "training material" for the school she set up.

For five years she taught a 12-month course to girls between 18 and 25 who wanted to work with small children. About 12 a year qualified as child nurses.

When she left Toronto the school was well-established. She headed back to England for post-graduate studies, finally returning to Canada, this time to settle in Vancouver.

The nursery school which she began is still run by her former teachers. She had less luck with her training school. In her scrapbook are scores of grateful letters from parents who have employed Miss Elliott's graduates in their home. Yet, in spite of the high standard which this zealous woman set, she was forced to close that part of her establishment.

NO FEES

Interested mainly in promoting mothercraft and "healthy living," Miss Elliott charged no tuition fees, restricting the costs to boarding expenses only.

Official pressure was brought to bear. Unless she could pay salaries in line with the minimum wage act requirements, she would not be granted a licence. The school closed.

But Miss Elliott has not given up her dream of seeing mothercraft again established in British Columbia.

She is convinced that a course in this subject should be included in the province's vocational training program.

"Mothercraft-trained nurses are in demand all over the Commonwealth. There must be hundreds of girls who would enjoy working in this field."

Miss Elliott agreed that the province's practical nurse program was good but "didn't go far enough."

She asked: "What more satisfying work could there be than helping to bring up healthy children?" She added quietly: "I can't think of one thing I would want to do more."

A Look at the Windsors—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor play with their five beagle pups, family pets for years, on grounds of their home in Paris. Rented home is in the Bois de Boulogne sector of the French capital. Three-storey house is on a 23-acre tract. Windsors have resided outside of Britain since their marriage in 1937. (AP Wire-photo.)

Duke Wears Country Clothes

PARIS (AP) — "Photographs? Oh no, I'm not at all dressed for it," said the Duke of Windsor patting his broad, loosely knotted necktie and short jacket of four-inch blue squares.

"Oh yes you are, dear," encouraged the duchess. "They can say you are in your country clothes."

A devotee of the countryside, the duke puts in his weekends working in the gardens of their rented 23-acre tract around a converted mill in the Chevreuse Valley outside Paris. There he does much of the actual digging in a garden designed by British landscape architect Russell Page.

"But you're so dressed up I wouldn't look right," the duke protested.

But he finally consented. The duke, 63, and the duchess, 68, have rented the home from the city of Paris since 1953. They have resided outside Britain since their marriage in 1937, following the duke's abdication as King Edward VIII.

Urge More Birth Control Study

OTTAWA (CP)—A resolution recommending freer distribution of birth control information in Canada will be studied by some 700,000 members of the National Council of Women before it is presented for approval to the council's annual meeting June 1-4 at Hamilton.

The resolution, given preliminary approval at a council executive meeting here, recommends that information on "child spacing" be made available to all parents who desire it, as part of the regular medical service of the community.

It adds that such information should be made available, for the benefit of parents who find it acceptable to their personal, moral and religious beliefs.

A resolution recommending a royal commission be set up to study Canada's abortion laws also will be put before the convention. Such a commission, says the resolution, would report on laws in Canada with regard to abortion to clarify them and bring them into conformity with the realities of Canadian life.

Mrs. Saul Hayes of Montreal, national president, said in an interview that the National Council of Women prides itself on the thorough consideration it gives all resolutions before they are submitted to the annual meeting.

The 2,000 federated societies—including such national groups as the Canadian Nurses' Association, the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs and the Canadian Federation of University Women—study each resolution in detail. They then instruct their voting delegates to the national convention whether to support or oppose a particular resolution.

After the annual meeting, the approved resolutions make up the council's formal brief to be presented in January or February.

SLOW PROCESS

"In this way," explained Mrs. Hayes, "the council has a full year from the time resolutions are first presented to the executive, to the time of presentation to the federal government, for a thorough study of each resolution it supports."

"Our wheels grind slowly, but when they finish grinding our resolutions have really been considered."

Commenting on any criticism that the council may be "spreading itself too thin" by becoming involved in too many fields, Mrs. Hayes said:

"Surely an organization as large as the National Council of Women does not have to concentrate its attention on only one or two major interests."

SOLUTION MONDAY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy. Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes. The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of World Book Encyclopedia to Jim Depp, 14, St. Louis, Mo., for his question:

How Do They Classify Plants?

The plant family Rosaceae includes the spreading apple tree, the low-growing strawberry and the garden rose. A non-botanist may see no kinship at all between these plants. But the expert notes a few vital features they have in common with 3,000 other plants of the rose family.

A beginner student of botany learns that 350,000 species of plants have been named and classified. He may wonder why the turnip is classed in the mustard family and the pansy in the carrot family. He may be puzzled to find the petunia in the same family with the potato, while the sweet potato is in the morning-glory family.

Many bright beginners have decided to scrap this bewildering classification and invent simpler systems of their own.

We could, they argue, place all the weedy trees in one class and all the thorny bushes in another. It seems reasonable to group together all the orchard trees or all the garden flowers. But the simple system never works out.

Experienced botanists know that the plants must be classified by certain family features. And most likely the thousands of species in a family are descended from a common ancestor. Each member of the rose family is a flowering plant, having both male and female reproductive cells, five sepals and numerous stamens. On this basis, the expert classifies apple and apricot, the meadowsweet and the mountain ash, the plum and the hawthorne in the family Rosaceae.

Latin Names Given to Plants

The entire plant kingdom is subdivided into four divisions. More than half of them are in the division Spermatophyta, the seed-bearing plants. The ferns and their kin are in the division Pteridophyta. The velvet mosses are in the division Bryophyta. The algae and other simple plants are in the division Thallophyta. The big divisions are subdivided into classes, orders, families, genera and species.

The scientific name for an ordinary corn plant is Zea mays. Its species is mays, its genus is Zea. Its family is Gramineae, and its order is Graminales. Its class is Angiospermae of the vast division Spermatophyta which includes more than half the plants in the world.

Each plant is known by the name of its genus and its species. Many of the scientific plant names are taken from Latin so that they can be understood by scholars of different countries. The oak genus is Quercus, from the Latin word for oak. Many oaks may use the genus name Quercus, but only one may be called Quercus rubra. This one is the species we call the Red Oak tree.

IT HAPPENED LAST NIGHT

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK — "Monty" Clift—after two cataract operations that gave him back normal vision—is emerging from his shell of privacy and frankly stating that he's fit and frisky at 44 and anxious to get acting again.

"I'm sick of being idle," he burst out candidly the other afternoon, sitting in his handsome 4-storey town house in the East 60s where he loves to get away from "the cacophony of the city."

"But," he emphasized, "I don't want to do something that isn't a real hurdle..."

"He swung around in his tweed suit with a red sweater under the jacket, to see if the interviewer understood."

"Can it be a small hurdle?" I asked.

"No! A high hurdle! Sounds silly, I suppose." After 29 years of acting he has been in about 13 pictures—he could have been in 113—but he keeps searching for scripts that will challenge him.

"You're not lazy?" we inquired.

"Basically, yes. But take Freud, the last thing I did. I would average four hours' sleep. That means sometimes I got two. It always happens somehow that the day after you got two hours' sleep they're going to do closeups and they use the closeups they took that day. You want to rehearse but sometimes your vis-a-vis couldn't care less about working on the scene."

"You can't eat lunch because you'll be sleepy and you can't go home and booze it up... No, I don't think I'm lazy... I'm selective. Why I became an actor I'll never know."

Not even needing glasses now, Clift goes to a gym to do calisthenics, perhaps entertains in his graceful dining room looking out on a garden that's been snow-covered much of this winter—and reads script after script looking for the one with the high hurdle.

THE WEEKEND WINDUP... Debbie Reynolds said at the Forum she has a fat offer to play the London Palladium; it includes a house, servants, Rolls Royce and a free Paris vacation... Carol Channing gives haircuts backstage to the members of the "Hello, Dolly!" cast... Pat Boone wants Van Cliburn in his next film...

Xavier Cugat was asked if he's the richest bandleader, and he cracked, "Once, maybe—before taxes got where they are, and my ex-wives got what they wanted."

Actor Rick Jason's shoulder is taped; a "breakaway" bottle he got belted with in a "Combat" sequence didn't break.

Capucine's real name is Germaine Lefevre—and that's why she's called Capucine. (Her new film's "Pink Panther"...)

THE FOUR DAYS OF NAPLES

Italian War Drama
Fox Theatre
The hero is Naples; the villain is war. There are no individual dramatization of the Neapolitan

The film, like the revolt, builds violence, plunging the spectator into a boiling inferno of battle.

And the cameras create an almost frightening illusion of reality.

This is a battle movie in the Italian tradition of "Open City" and "Paisan." It was shot in the actual locations where the rebellion took place and director
Nanni Loy employed 12,000
Neapolitans in the cast. None of the professional actors is identified—because, as Loy says, the film is a tribute to the people of Naples.

When the Germans occupy Naples after the surrender of Italy, no one dreams of rebellion.
But when the invaders declare martial law and round up the Neapolitans for their labor camps, the temper of the population boils into revolt.
Grim little groups break out their hidden weapons and converge on German units. A substantial enemy force is besieged in a soccer stadium.
German columns rush to the rescue, but the rebels volley grenades from the rooftops, open fire from parked cars and pile barricades across their narrow streets.

A gang of boys from the local reform school joins in the fight, with college professors, ex-Italian soldiers, workers and storekeepers.

With the Allies advancing on Naples, the Germans realize they cannot put up an effective resistance in this nest of vipers and the commandant asks for an inglorious truce so he can withdraw his forces from the city.

The story is brilliantly presented and the anti-war message is strikingly powerful against a background of violence, tyranny and heroism.

ELIZABETH TAYLOR
... no settlement

Liz Divorced; Off With Old On With New

PUERTO VALLARTA, Mexico
(AP)—An uncontested Mexican divorce appeared today to have cleared the way for Elizabeth Taylor to marry Richard Burton.

Judge Arcadio Estrada granted the film actress her freedom from singer Eddie Fisher Thursday because Fisher had not contested the divorce suit she filed in Puerto Vallarta Jan. 14.

The judge said his decree permitted both Miss Taylor and Fisher to remarry.

Miss Taylor was in Toronto with the Welsh actor, who played Antony to her Cleopatra both on and off the screen. Burton is appearing there in Hamlet, prior to bringing it to Broadway next month. He and Miss Taylor eluded reporters after the divorce was announced.

FISHER SILENT

There was no comment from Fisher, last reported in Puerto Rico. Presumably he and Miss Taylor have not reached a settlement of his claims on her earnings from Cleopatra, which are expected to be at least $2,000,000.

In granting Miss Taylor's divorce, the judge said he could not make a financial ruling because no community property existed in Mexico.

River Report Tabled

OTTAWA (CP)—The Nelson River in northern Manitoba has a power potential which is twice Manitoba's needs for the next 25 years and can produce power for export at economic prices, which would benefit Canada's balance of payments difficulties with the United States, Resources Minister Laing said in the Commons today.

He tabled a bulky report of a detailed preliminary study of the river ordered by the former Conservative government. He prepared to discuss with Manitoba the next stage in a study of the development.

Quickfreeze Ignites Slow Burn

By LESLIE MILLIN
Grand Ole Opry ground its chilled bones through three icy hours for a small, cold audience in Memorial Arena on Thursday evening.

It was a great three-way match between the western country music show, the acoustics and the ice—but the ice won.
"We are musicians, not polar bears," one performer snapped to a reporter in the intermission.

About 400 persons were scattered through the south half of the arena to hear Faron Young, Kittie Wells, Johnnie Wright and the Tennessee Mountain Boys joke and sing through chattering teeth.

By the second half of the program several performers had given up and donned overcoats, and some of the audience had given up and gone home.

Bravery medals were in order for the Tennessee Mountain Boys who played the whole show in their shirt sleeves, and incidentally provided by far the best music, although it was supposed to be background.

Miss Kitty Wells, also known as Mrs. Johnnie Wright, sang for about 15 minutes with her arms bare, and sounded almost as good.

The other singers—Faron
Young, Webb Pierce, Carl Smith and Bill Phillips sounded almost identical in their adenoidal way, although the arena's curious acoustics may have been to blame.

In any case, one had the impression of being 'chained to a juke box for a couple of hours.

Most of the audience, who decided to stay clapped and cheered as often as possible, keeping everybody's spirits up a bit.

Country humor was rampant, though not exactly warm, throughout the show until the second half appearance of western-style comedienne Minnie Pearl (the How-

Also honest.
"I don't normally wear an

In Our HOUSE

By Arthur Mayse

For a difficult job well done, I commend to you Deputy Speaker William Speare, the quiet but durable government member for Cariboo who this session is chairing the House through its estimates of revenue and expenditure.

This phase of parliament's massive assignment is a rough one. The protocol of formal debate is behind us. Now, with the House in committee of supply, it is first come first served and devil take the hindmost, with members frequently contesting for the floor.

Sometimes as many as four members hop up in a dead heat.

"The chair recognizes the honorable member for Muskral Meadows," intones the referee from his post between our black-gowned clerks-at-law; and that, without argument or right of appeal, is that.

Cut of Debate

When one of parliament's verbal roughhouses erupts, it is for chairman Speare to restore peace. This he does with terse vigor. "Order!" he barks, and down cracks the gavel to back his command.

Perhaps the best tribute to Mr. Speare is the complaint. I have heard from champions of all three parties... that he really could sometimes let debate (meaning in this context the slash at an opponent's jugular) continue a little longer.

Here's a sample of what Speare of Cariboo must contend with:

Chain of Yawns

William Hartley, Yale's contribution to the Legislative Assembly, beats NDP teammate Alex Macdonald to the jump as we pass from labor estimates to the health department votes.

He speaks earnestly of many things, while the clock hands creep from 9:38 to 10, and one yawn sets off another in a chain reaction.

Finally, 42 minutes after Mr. Hartley set out to assure us that health is joy. Sacred Dan Campbell ups with his bludgeon and lets fly a dart. The bored back benches squeak and titter. Mr. Hartley leans and glowers.

Bit of Shame

"If that is all the respect some members have for the House," he bawls, "to sit and giggle and laugh... they don't belong here. They ought to go home, they ought to resign from this Legislature!"

Then, to Mr. Campbell, a dressing-down that reached a soaring peroration:

"Shame! Shame on the member for Comox!"

Jolly fun, but time-wasting. Chairman Speare returns Mr. Hartley to his track, along which he chuffs for two mortal minutes more.

Nip of Vinegar

"My friend from Yale," said Mr. Turner, perhaps tempering party solidarity with the merest nip of vinegar, "has gone into the whole matter quite thoroughly, and I think has done quite a good job for a new member."

The Legislature's senior member then moved in like a skilled pro for a testing tap at Health Minister Martin's jaw. This with a reference to the Martin "bodyguard" of civil servants crouched in echelon behind his chief.

Local Mail Rate Ends In Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—Postmaster-General Nicholson gave notice today of higher postal rates for first-class mail in local deliveries.

The present rate on letters of four cents for the first ounce and two cents for each additional ounce is to be abolished.

This will mean that first-class letters for local delivery will be charged at the standard inter-city rate of five cents for the first ounce and three cents for each additional ounce or fraction thereof, a post office spokesman said.

Mr. Nicholson's move was made in a resolution put on the Commons order paper preceding a bill to amend the Post Office Act.

Effective date of the change was not given. The resolution also forecast changes in the postal rates for newspapers and periodicals other than those published more frequently than weekly.

Details were not spelled out.

Guide Death Trial Set For Hunter

100 MILE HOUSE (CP)—A Washington State hunter will face trial on a charge of criminal negligence in the shooting death of a guide.

Grant Wyndinger of Kent, Wash., was committed Thursday after a preliminary hearing in this central British Columbia community. He will appear at the Spring Assizes in Prince George.

Wyndinger was charged after Guide Jack King was shot and killed Nov. 22, 1963, near the Bridge Lake guest ranch, 20 miles east of here.

Tanker Blows Up in Sound 25 Rescued, 15 Missing

'Like Atom Bomb' Says Witness

ANACORTES (AP)—The 504-foot tanker Bunker Hill, sailing empty up Puget Sound, blew apart in three fiery explosions before dawn today and sank in 300 feet of water off Whidbey Island.

Twenty-five of the crew were rescued by a navy crash boat and coast guard helicopter. All but two were unhurt.

The others aboard, estimated at about 15, were unaccounted for and feared dead. They included most of the officers, whose quarters were amidship where the blasts occurred.

The tanker normally carried a crew of 44, but several were ashore.

Planes, helicopters and crash boats searched throughout the day in a wind and rain storm for other possible survivors, but there was little hope. Hours went by with no trace, and survival time in the icy water was estimated at little more than an hour.

None of the survivors could explain what happened when the ship, owned by the Keystone Tankship Corporation, Wilmington, Del., was ripped in two in Rosario Strait 19 miles southeast of here.

The Bunker Hill, which operated most of the time in Pacific Northwest waters, was bound from Tacoma, Wash., for the Shell Oil Co. refinery at Anacortes to take on a load of gasoline for Portland, Ore.

The crew said the tanks had been washed with sea water and all usual safety precautions had been taken.

Horace Bailey of Belfast, Maine, said the blast "blew me out of the sack." He said the door to his room was stuck but he forced it open and fled, wearing only the bottom part of his long underwear and a life jacket. He left $100 in cash behind, and said some of the other survivors lost as much as $500.

The first explosion was seen at 4:02 a.m. PST, from the Whidbey Island naval station control tower. Petty Officer G. Mogridge, the air controller, said it looked "like a small atom bomb."

Mogridge said there was a flash in the sky, then two more explosions. He could see the superstructure of the tanker etched against the horizon about five miles off shore.

A navy P2V warning up for anti-submarine patrol was diverted to the scene and reported minutes later seeing survivors in the water and on the fantail.

A navy crash boat, quickly on the scene, picked up 21 men and a coast guard helicopter rescued four.

Junior third mate, is also unaccounted for.

The National Maritime Union listed an additional five men in the crew not among the known survivors. They were Jim Johnson, radio operator, address unknown; Harold Schmidt, steward, Spokane, Wash.; Steve Harris, messman, Seattle; William Still, messman, whose home is in California; and William Bishop, Seattle.

The second mate, Burtrum L. Vulliet, was not aboard. Vulliet had taken off for this trip.

The 10,000-ton Bunker Hill was built at Chester, Pa., in 1942, and carried petroleum products for the Shell Co.

REMAINS of tanker Bunker Hill—a life buoy and oily life-jackets—are displayed by seamen at Whidbey Island naval air station after being left by some of the 22 crewmen rescued. (AP Wirephoto.)

SEAMAN'S STORY:

'It Was Like A Bomb Hit Us'

Sheldon Phillips of Seattle, chief pumpman, was one of the first crewmen rescued after the tanker Bunker Hill exploded and sank in Puget Sound before dawn Friday. Here is his account of what happened, as told to Associated Press.

By SHELDON PHILLIPS
It was like a bomb hit us. And it still seems like a nightmare. I don't know how it could have happened. This was a good crew and we've always been very, very safety conscious.

We'd just finished washing the empty tanks with salt water before pulling into Anacortes to take on a load of gasoline at the Shell refinery for Portland. It was still dark, about two hours before dawn. I was sitting in the mess with three others having a cup of coffee when there was an enormous explosion. It threw me against the bulkhead in the mess and I had to knock down a door to get out.

All hell had broken loose. I ran to the aft end of the ship and tried to look toward the bow. All we saw was a sheet of flames. The blast had blown the tanker right in half. I'll never forget seeing the bow section floating by, pointed up like a missile, with Harold Baker of Los Angeles, the lookout, hanging on to a handrail.

Another blast
Then there was another explosion on the bow section and another big sheet of flame. Later, I saw Harold in the water. He was badly burned. Those of us who made it

SEATTLE (AP)—Ira O. Philpott Jr. of Seattle, third mate on the tanker Bunker Hill, missed Friday's explosion and blast which sank the ship because the tanker left Tacoma ahead of time Thursday night.

"The ship was to have left at midnight," he said. "Then the time was changed, and I wasn't notified. I got there at 11:25 and it was just pulling away from the dock."

'Don't Inflamm Passions'—LBJ

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson, in a personal message made public today, has told Soviet Premier Khrushchev that outsiders "should all strive not to inflame passions" in the eastern Mediterranean.

Johnson's 200-word letter, dated Wednesday, said it was the firm intention of the U.S. government to avoid heightening passions raised by the Cyprus dispute. He added:

"I sincerely hope, Mr. Chairman, that it is also that of your government."

Johnson at the same time took Khrushchev to task for some of the statements made by the Soviet leader in a Feb. 7 letter to the president. It was the Khrushchev letter that prompted the response from Johnson.

The president said he had carefully studied Khrushchev's

message and had concluded that it "was based upon a seriously mistaken appreciation both of the situation in Cyprus, and of the aims of the United States in agreeing to lend its assistance in improving that situation."

The president said U.S. actions have been "for one purpose alone, that of assisting the Cypriots to restore a peaceful situation in Cyprus."

Johnson told Khrushchev that the Soviet premier's February letter was based on faulty premises, "whatever may have been the motivations of the Soviet government."

However, Johnson said he would "agree fully... with one thought that you expressed in your letter," adding:

"It is certainly true that avoiding aggravation of the situation in the eastern Mediterranean is in the general interests of all of us."

EVEN HONEST CUSTOMERS DON'T MIND

Bank Bandits, Forgers Fear New Cameras

MONTREAL (UPI)—Bandits are staying away in droves from city houses of commerce, thanks in a large part, say the banks and the police, to two anti-crook camera innovations.

The devices have been placed in selected banks on an experimental basis. The most spectacular is a hidden movie camera that records holdup attempts at the flick of a switch, but the one that is producing the most spectacular results is "regiscope," a camera that looks like a gum machine.

Regiscope photographs unknown or questionable check cashers, and prints on the same picture a photo of the check. At least two banks say they have not had a single loss through forgery or rubber checks since they installed the machines months ago.

"And equally important to

BATTLE JOINED

Haida War Party To Go to Alaska

The "Battle of the Haidas" is on as groups in Victoria and Washington State jockey for favor with Alaska on the proposed "Route of the Haidas" marine highway to Alaska.

DELEGATION

Latest move planned is a delegation to Alaska from Vancouver Island and Washington chambers of commerce.

The delegation was proposed Thursday night by Victoria chamber's tourist industry group.

Support for the Route of the Haidas—which includes a Vancouver Island highway joining the Prince Rupert ferry at Kelsey Bay—has come from the Asanotos Chamber.

This is in the face of opposition from an all-out Bellingham bid for a direct Bellingham-Alaska ferry.

'Join Appeal'

Victoria Labour Council Wednesday night endorsed the current Canada Heart Fund and Red Cross Society appeals, but urged that they become members of a United Appeal.

B.C. Government ferry link unprofitable.

Port Angeles Chamber of Commerce representative Ron Bayton told a meeting in Victoria Thursday night that Route of the Haidas backers are obviously "way ahead" of Bellingham interests.

He said it will get an enthusiastic reaction from Alaska, which is looking to tourism to rescue the poor economic growth of the 49th state.

Bulb Explodes at Airport

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A box containing a cordless, battery-operated movie camera light bulb burst into flames yesterday just seconds before it was to be loaded on a New York-bound airliner at Washington national airport.

The Air Transport Association promptly sent telegrams to all U.S. scheduled airlines and free world foreign carriers warning them that similar shipments may be hazardous.

The manufacturer of the bulb, Sylvania said it was being shipped by the National Broadcasting Co. and "was out of control of Sylvania." A spokesman said the light was a used one, and that fresh bulbs shipped by the manufacturer were "always in a completely discharged state."

Pioneer Square was squarely hit at about 6 a.m. today by a motorist in a new car with only 640 miles on the spectrometer, knocking over an historic stone marker and sending driver to hospital with facial cuts.

Police identified the driver as William S. Wylie, 450 Dallas. He was still in St. Joseph's Hospital at noon.

They said the car was seen going east on Broughton Street at a high rate of speed, through a stop sign at Quadra Street. The car went out of control, over the curb, and hit the rock.

The rock—four feet by four feet by five feet—was knocked over, and Mr. Wylie's car bounced over the rock, then slid down on its side.

First reports stated the overturned stone was the result of vandalism, but tire marks across the sidewalk, as shown in the photo, showed the car was on a dead straight line when it hit the stone.

Shattered bits of headlight glass were strewn about the grass on the far side of the marker.

with details of the origin of Pioneer Square, which contains the graves of many of Victoria's early citizens.

Friends Protecting Escapee, Say Police

Tell-Tale Thefts Haven't Shown Up

Saanich police suspect escaped convict Richard Rodriguez is being protected by friends. Rodriguez has now been at large since last Friday without police finding any trace of him.

Police think Rodriguez has obtained help because there has been no report of any break-ins where food or clothing was taken.

Escapees usually resort to break-ins to obtain food and change of clothing.

Police pointed out anybody who helps an escapee is liable to a maximum term of one year in jail.

Rodriguez broke out of prison along with Frank Carlow who later gave himself up to police after telling The Times about what he described as sub-standard conditions in the jail.

CLOSE CUSTODY

Carlow is now back in Colquitz where he was transferred Tuesday after he appeared in court charged with escaping custody.

Jack Gatehouse, the lawyer assigned by Victoria Bar Association to represent Carlow, said today his client is being kept in close custody away from other prisoners.

Mr. Gatehouse said he will try and find confirmation of Carlow's charges about the bad conditions inside Colquitz. A report on the jail is being prepared by prison authorities for the attorney-general's department but it is not yet known if this will be made public.

SHORT OUTING COSTS MAN $169, RADIO

A man who left his house for only three hours early Thursday night returned to find it broken into and $169 cash missing.

Walter Lisetz, 501 Richmond, also lost a $24 radio to the thieves who entered through a basement window. The place was ransacked.

Mrs. Lisetz had cashed a pay cheque earlier in the day and didn't have time to bank the money. She locked it in a cupboard.

Mathematics 'Lazy Boy's Subject'

Mathematics is for the lazy boys—they look for the easy way to find the answer.

And mathematics should be taught so that it encourages this type of thinking, Dr. E. D. Nichols, head of the mathematics education department of Florida State University, said here today.

Dr. Nichols was speaking to 800 teachers this morning at the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association convention. Teachers, he said, must inspire students with the desire to explore and investigate new avenues in the field of mathematics.

WHAT FOR?

If a student asks "What is it good for?" he is really saying "I don't understand it and don't like it."

New emphasis in education is on how a subject should be taught, not what is taught, said Dr. Nichols as he described the recent developments in mathematics.

Now educationists realize that children can learn much more at an early age than was previously thought possible, if taught by new methods.

"We have entered an era when the curriculum is constantly being revised and set for a 20-year period at a time," he said.

New problems are constantly being written to keep up with the maturity level of the student.

Mathematics is not so much concerned with minute skills but rather it is more concerned with abstract patterns. As it is taught it must reflect the underlying principles of the art (not a science, says Dr. Nichols) and it must leave the student with the desire to discover new solutions.

Mathematics is a living and growing subject and mathematicians are now working on cleaning up its language so it can become the precise art it is alleged to be.

The convention was officially opened this morning by Mrs. A. B. Thompson, chairman of the Greater Victoria School Board; John Gough, superintendent of schools; Rudy Kaser, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Teachers, and Dave Urwin, chairman of the convention committee. It continues Saturday at Victoria Senior Secondary School.

One of them was seen to put two part bottles of beer under the car.

"Expensive beer," commented Magistrate William Ostler.

Ask The Times

Q. Who, originally, was farighted enough to set aside Beacon Hill as parkland for future citizens? R.C.

A. It was reserved for a public park by Governor James Douglas in 1858. In 1882 the provincial government gave the parkland to the city of Victoria in trust for the "use, recreation and enjoyment of the public." Development of the park dates from 1889 when a loan of $25,000 was approved by ratepayers. John Blair, a Scottish landscape architect, won a prize for the best development plan and was named to head the project.

The same year 2,000 trees and shrubs were donated by a group of local citizens.

Q. What was the name of the theatre that used to be located on Fort Street between Douglas and Blanshard sometime early in the century? F.E.F.

A. It was called the Philharmonic Hall.

DAWDYS DAWDLED

Tom Cat-apults Ahead of Family

By LESLIE MILLIN

A worried Calgary family arrived in Victoria this week to find their missing Tomcat had pussyfooted his way here ahead of them—in style.

The travelling Tom turned up missing when S. Dawdy and his family were preparing to leave Calgary for their new home in Victoria.

Furniture was loaded, suitcases packed—and Tom wasn't there.

EVIDENCE

Their furniture left Calgary on Monday, arrived here Thursday, and was being unloaded when movers noticed Unmistakable Signs.

They contacted the SPCA—and inspector Oscar Vennberg dug Tom out of the family davenport.

He'd travelled the 600 miles in his own personal Pullman car.

GOOD SHAPE

Tom checked in at the SPCA where secretary Dave Beech reported him to be black, white, and perfectly healthy.

When the Dawdy family arrived very shortly, Tom was rested and ready to greet them.

They thought he was a gone cat because he'd split that prairie scene first—but this was the Tom that cut out by himself.

WIDOW GIVES $100

"One woman who had applied for a war widow's pension gave us $100 when it came through as it was retroactive to 15 months."

"She said in her letter she had been living on welfare and she had three children under four years of age when her husband died on congenital heart disease," Mrs. Barry said.

Eighty-eight per cent of campaign funds will go towards research of heart and other circulatory diseases and education of the public.

Remainder is made up of 7 per cent for administration and 5 per cent campaign costs.

Pensioners Meet

Langford Branch No. 60, Old Age Pensioners Organization, will meet Monday for an auction at 2 p.m. in Cade Memorial Hall.

Tidal Survey To Start On Tuesday

The United States department of commerce will start an extensive nine-month tidal survey in Pacific Northwest waters Tuesday.

The study will strengthen existing tidal current tables to aid mariners and will help in planning bridge construction and dredging operations.

Two ships, the Bowie and the Hodgson, will be used in the survey which will obtain the times of slack water and time, direction and velocity of flood and ebb currents at 90 locations in the Puget Sound area.

Each vessel is 136 feet long, has a displacement of 267 tons and carries a crew of four officers and 24 men.

Points near Victoria where current data will be gathered are Race Rocks and the San Juan Islands.

Chess Champion To Be Seen Against Crowd

Vancouver Island chess champion Olavi Sarakannas will take on all chess players simultaneously in an exhibition at the Hudson Bay's Douglas Room, 12 noon to 5 p.m.

The exhibition is being sponsored by the Victoria City Chess Club.

Results of the tournament play currently underway at the Westholme Hotel leaves Mr. Sarakannas still in the lead with 12 games in his pocket and Charles Birch second with nine wins.

Heart Fund Leaps Over Target

Victoria and Vancouver Island branch of the B.C. Heart Foundation saw its campaign go over the top today with donations amounting to $30,580.

The month-long campaign ended Feb. 29 "but we still have people coming into the office to make donations and we expect mail to continue for another two or three weeks," said Island secretary Mrs. Mae Barry.

'WE'LL MAKE OUT SOMEHOW, I GUESS'

Odd Job Man Loses Tools as House Guttled

Fire that gutted an uninsured Patricia Bay home early this morning left a family of three homeless, jobless and with only the clothes they wore.

Harry Jones left the five-room house on the Union Bay Indian reserve with his two young sons Thursday evening after dinner to visit his brother about half a mile from their home at 10355 West Saanich Road.

When he returned after midnight, the little frame house was a flaming torch that took firemen three hours to extinguish.

This morning, only a black husk of a house looks out on to Patricia Bay.

Although no one was home, there were casualties—everything the family owned, Mr. Jones' means of making his living, and a goldfish.

Mr. Jones does odd jobs around Patricia Bay and Deep Cove.

All his tools—including a big investment, his power saw—were destroyed.

The origin of the fire is still unknown—and a mystery to Mr. Jones.

"We had a cold supper last night," he said.

"The stove was only on long enough to heat the kettle. It wasn't on for much of the day."

"We came down to my brother Sandy's, and when we were going home after midnight there was this big light down the road, and the kids thought the house might be on fire."

"We ran down, and it was," Sidney volunteer fire department got the alarm about 12:30, and sent a 12-man crew.

The blaze was so fierce firemen could not determine where the fire started.

Firemen tried to save a few possessions from the flames, but heat drove them back.

"I don't know what we're going to do now," Mr. Jones said.

He and his sons Harry and Hayward stayed with his brother Sandy overnight, but they can't stay there much longer.

With no insurance to cover the loss, he's not sure which way to turn.

His brother Sandy Jones, 10429 West Saanich, hopes to collect a few household items to keep the family going. They may be able to find another house on the reservation.

"We'll make out somehow, I guess," says Mr. Jones.

Harry Jones and Harry Jr. . . supper was cold.

Ruby Watches Act on Film

DALLAS (AP)—The state completed its direct testimony against Jack Ruby, on trial for murdering Lee Harvey Oswald, at 2:55 p.m. (3:53 p.m. EST) today.

DALLAS (AP)—A Dallas police officer testified today that Jack Ruby told him he thought of killing Lee Harvey Oswald on Friday night, Nov. 22, when President Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas.

Two Men Stage Jailbreak

DALLAS (AP)—Two men broke out of the Dallas county jail today, a deputy said, one of them propelling a woman hostage along a corridor near the Jack Ruby murder trial courtroom.

Both men were captured moments later.

The one man's progress with his hostage was punctuated by screams from Little Lynn, a 19-year-old, pregnant striptease dancer who was waiting to testify in the trial of Ruby, charged with slaying President Kennedy's accused assassin.

"Oh, my God," screamed the striptease performer. "He's after me."

FAKED PISTOL

Little Lynn had seen two men back out of an area where no one was supposed to be.

Officers who captured both men said the man who had held the woman hostage actually faked having a pistol.

Mrs. Rosemary Allen, a deputy, said: "It definitely was a jail break."

Mrs. Melvin M. Bell wife of Ruby's chief defence counsel, rushed Little Lynn into a stairwell along with Mrs. Allen to protect the dancer against any harm. A reporter helped block the stairwell door.

Vessel Sinks Off Anacortes

ANACORTES (AP)—The 504-foot tanker Bunker Hill, sailing empty up Puget Sound, blew apart in three fiery explosions before dawn today and sank in 300 feet of water off Whidbey Island.

Twenty-five of the crew were rescued by a navy crash boat and coast guard helicopter. All but two were unhurt.

The others aboard, estimated at about 15, were unaccounted for and feared dead. They included most of the officers, whose quarters were amidship where the blasts occurred.

The tanker normally carried a crew of 44, but several were ashore.

Planes, helicopters and crash boats searched throughout the day in a wind and rain storm for other possible survivors, but there was little

Safety Precautions Taken

The crew said the tanks had been washed with sea water and all usual safety precautions had been taken.

Horace Bailey of Belfast, Maine, said the blast "blew me out of the sack." He said the door to his room was stuck but he forced it open and fled, wearing only the bottom part of his long underwear and a life jacket. He left $100 in cash behind, and said some of the other survivors lost as much as $600.

It was like a bomb hit us. And it still seems like a nightmare. I don't know how it could have happened. This was a good crew and we've always been very, very safety conscious.

It was still dark, about two hours before dawn.

I was sitting in the mess

with three others having a cup of coffee when there was an enormous explosion. It threw me against the bulkhead in the mess and I had to knock down a door to get out.

All hell had broken loose. I ran to the aft end of the ship and tried to look toward the bow. All we saw was a sheet of flames. The blast had blown the tanker right in half.

I'll never forget seeing the bow section floating by, pointed up like a missile, with Harold Baker of Los Angeles, the lookout, hanging on to a handrail.

ANOTHER BLAST

Then there was another explosion on the bow section and another big sheet of flame. Later, I saw Harold in the water. He was badly burned.

B.C. WINS BRIER

Extra-End Decision Does It!

CHARLOTTETOWN, (CP)—British Columbia won the Canadian curling championship today for the first time in 16 years with a final round extra-end 9-7 uphill squeaker over a stubborn Prince Edward Island rink.

The victory gave the Lyall Dagg foursome from Vancouver a 9-1 won-lost record in the 10-game round-robin tournament, the premier prize in Canadian curling since 1927.

British Columbia, which entered the Brier Tankard playoffs in 1936, had won it only once before—in 1948—when Frenchy D'Amour skipped a Trail rink to the national title.

fort that led to 8-3 B.C. victory today. Vancouver rink went on to bring Canadian curling championship to B.C. for only second time in history. (CP Wirephoto.)

TWIN DOUBLE

Hotel Workers Win $84,114

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Two Miami Beach hotel employees disclosed today they had put up $1 each on a ticket that won the biggest payoff in United States horse-racing history—$84,114, on Thursday's twin double at Gulfstream Park.

"I've never had an extra buck in my pocket in my life," said Juan Lopez, 52-year-old Puerto Rican.

It was Lopez who went to the track and bought the ticket for himself and Guardencio Danny Tuazon, a Filipino cook who works in Miami Beach in the winters and at Klamasha Lake, N.Y., in the summers.

HELD ON TIGHT

Lopez said that when the payoff was announced, "I just held on to the ticket tight and went home shaking all over."

I called Danny and we arranged to meet this morning and pick up the cash.

"What can't I do with all that money? I would be happy if it was only a thousand dollars."

Tuazon, who picks horses and dogs by numbers instead of form, said his biggest payoff in the past was $400.

Guide Death Trial Set For Hunter

100 MILE HOUSE (CP)—A Washington State hunter will face trial on a charge of criminal negligence in the shooting death of a guide.

Grant Wyninger, of Kent, Wash., was committed Thursday after a preliminary hearing in this central British Columbia community. He will appear at the Spring Assizes in Prince George.

Wyninger was charged after Guide Jack King was shot and killed Nov. 22, 1963, near the Bridge Lake guest ranch, 20 miles east of here.

Final Arguments In Banks' Trial

MONTREAL (CP)—Final arguments were heard today at the preliminary hearing of Hal C. Banks on a charge of conspiracy to commit assault.

Sessions Judge Emile Trotter set March 12 as date for judgment on whether to send the president of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind.) to trial.

Bank Bandits, Forgers Fear New Cameras

MONTREAL (UPI)—Bandits are staying away in droves from city houses of commerce, thanks in a large part, say the banks and the police, to two anti-crook camera innovations.

The devices have been placed in selected banks on an experimental basis. The most spectacular is a hidden movie camera that records holdup-attempts at the flick of a switch, but the one that is producing the most spectacular results is "regiscope".

Regiscope photographs unknown or questionable check cashers, and prints on the same picture a photo of the check. At least two banks say they have not had a single loss through forgery or rubber checks since they installed the machines months ago.

"And equally important to us," said an official of the Royal Bank of Canada, "our honest customers don't seem to mind when we ask them to be 'regiscope'."

There are two types of hidden holdup cameras. One takes pictures at intervals of a few seconds, the other records the entire holdup sequence as a motion picture.

Police Director J. Adrien Robert calls the cameras "one of the most important innovations in many years in the prevention of bank holdups."

"They have contributed, along with a stepped-up program of patrols and a faster roadblock system, in achieving what we consider a significant reduction of successful bank robbery attempts," Robert said.

'Don't Inflamm Passions'—LBJ

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson, in a personal message made public today, Las told Soviet Premier Khrushchev that outsiders "should all strive not to inflame passions" in the eastern Mediterranean.

Johnson's 200-word letter, dated Wednesday, said it was the firm intention of the U.S. government to avoid heightening passions raised by the Cyprus dispute. He added:

"I sincerely hope, Mr. Chairman, that it is also that of your government."

Johnson at the same time took Khrushchev's task for some of the statements made by the Soviet leader in a Feb. 7 letter to the president. It was the Khrushchev letter that prompted the response from Johnson.

The president said he had carefully studied Khrushchev's message and had concluded that it "was based upon a seriously mistaken appreciation both of the situation in Cyprus, and of the aims of the United States in agreeing to lend its assistance in improving that situation."

The president said U.S. actions have been "for one purpose alone, that of assisting the Cypriots to restore a peaceful situation in Cyprus."

Johnson told Khrushchev that the Soviet premier's February letter was based on faulty premises, "whatever may have been the motivations of the Soviet government."

However, Johnson said he would "agree fully" with one thought that you expressed in your letter, adding:

Local Mail Rate Ends In Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—Postmaster General Nicholson gave notice today of higher postal rates for first-class mail-in local deliveries.

The present rate on letters of four cents for the first ounce and two cents for each additional ounce is to be abolished.

This will mean that first-class letters for local delivery will be charged at the standard inter-city rate of five cents for the first ounce and three cents for each additional ounce or fraction thereof, a post office spokesman said.

Mr. Nicholson's move was made in a resolution put on the Commons-order paper preceding a bill to amend the Post Office Act.

Effective date of the change was not given.

The resolution also forecast changes in the postal rates for newspapers and periodicals other than those published more frequently than weekly.

RUBY

As to how Ruby got to the jail door when Oswald was being transferred to another jail, McMillon said Ruby told him he simply walked there.

"He stated a lieutenant was pulling out of the basement in a squad car and he just walked by an officer there between the wall and the car. He said someone called to him but he just ducked his head and kept going."

Chief defence counsel Melvin Belli asked if Ruby hadn't told McMillon he "did not premeditate shooting" Oswald. The officer said, "he didn't tell me that."

The two other survivors treated at a hospital here and 21 at the Whidbey Naval Hospital were reported in good condition and released.

Among the missing were the skipper, Capt. Michael J. Abraham, Garden Grove, Calif., and chief mate, R. H. Blake, Long Beach, Calif. Both were on the bridge when the explosion struck. Ronald Lockwood, Mountlake Terrace, Wash., the junior third mate, is also unaccounted for.

The National Maritime Union listed an additional five men in the crew not among the known survivors. They were Jim Johnson, radio operator, address unknown; Harold Schmidt, steward, Spokane, Wash.; Steve Harris, messman, Seattle; William Still, messman, whose home is in California; and William Bishop, Seattle.

Perhaps the best tribute to Mr. Speare is the complaint I have heard from champions of all three parties . . . that he really could sometimes let debate (meaning in this context the slash at an opponent's jugular) continue a little longer.

Here's a sample of what Speare of Cariboo must contend with:

William Hartley, Yale's contribution to the Legislative Assembly, beats NDP teammate Alex Macdonald to the jump as we pass from labor estimates to the health department votes.

He speaks earnestly of many things, while the clock hands creep from 9:38 to 10, and one yawn sets off another in a chain reaction.

Finally, 42 minutes after Mr. Hartley set out to assure us that health is joy, Scored Dan Campbell ups with his blowgun and jets fly a dart.

Bit of Shame

"If that is all the respect some members have for the House," he bawls, "to sit and giggle and laugh, they don't belong here. They ought to go home, they ought to resign from this Legislature!"

Then, to Mr. Campbell, a dressing-down that reached a soaring peroration:

"Shame! Shame on the member for Comox! Jolly fun, but time-wasting. Chairman Speare returns Mr. Hartley to his track, along which he chuffs for two mortal minutes more.

The luck of the draw went next to wise grey Arthur Turner of Vancouver East. "My friend from Yale," said Mr. Turner, perhaps tempering party solidarity with the merest nip of vinegar, "has gone into the whole matter quite thoroughly, and I think has done quite a good job for a new member."

Agriculture Worth $150 Million

Agriculture in B.C. last year was a $150,000,000 industry, with gains in nearly all crops but grain, hit by drought in the Peace River region.

The annual report of the provincial agriculture department, tabled in the legislature Thursday, said total income was $150,146,000 — down $1,500,000 from the record total of 1962.

However, production generally was "well maintained and even increased in some instances, notably in apples and eggs — the latter reaching an all-time record."

Farm prices remained generally steady, although "a definite softening occurred in cattle prices during the year," the report said.

RESIDENTS of the Langford-Colwood-Metchosin area will meet Monday night in Belmont High School to weigh the advisability of forming an organized district or municipality. Speakers will be Herbert Bruch, MLA for Esquimalt, and John Williams, chairman of the Sooke School District 62.
